ALABAMA CRUSHES WASHINGTON STATE, 24 TO 0, IN ANNUAL ROSE TOURNAMENT GAME ON COAST

COUNTY IS READY TO HELP BOROUGH IN SEWER PROJECT

Commissioners All Declare Willingness To Cooperate Any Time Assistance Is Requested.

KEY'S ROTARY CLUB TALK IS RESENTED

Members of Board Assert Mayor-Elect Should Have Asked Aid Before Criticizing County.

Fulton county stands ready to furnish equipment and labor and to cooperate in every way with the borough government in the construction of the city's new $13,000,000 sewerage system and on other improvements of the municipality, members of the board of county commissioners said Thursday.

The commissioners, in statements replying to a request of Mayor-elect James L. Key, made in an address Tuesday before the Rotary Club asserted that they were ready to vote in favor of Mr. Key's requests "any time he appears before the board and asks assistance."

Commissioner Walter C. Hendrix, who is slated to be elected chairman of the board at its reorganization meeting, said that he personally was in favor of immediate completion of the sewer project and would give Mr. Key all the assistance possible. Mr. Hendrix indicated he resented the mayor-elect's making the request before a civic body without first appearing before the commission, but made it clear that he was willing to co-operate fully.

Ready To Co-operate.

"Mr. Key's appearance before the Rotary Club with a request for assistance from the county board is not conducive to getting that assistance," Mr. Hendrix said. "However, the county board always has co-operated fully with the borough government and we certainly shall on the needed sewer project."

In his Rotary Club address, Mr. Key said that if the county furnished the labor and equipment the cost of the sewer project could be cut in half and the needed money could be raised.

Although he expressed himself as resenting the manner in which the mayor-elect brought up the subject of county co-operation, Commissioner Walter B. Stewart assured the people of the city and county of the commission's willingness to co-operate. He said:

"Fulton county has always contributed both in money and labor in major as well as minor projects in the city. There is no disposition on the part of the board to do otherwise now or in the future. Mr. Key's tirade against the county was entirely uncalled-for and was palpably an effort to bolster the ballyhoo he has been indulging in for the past few months. There has been no definite program presented to the county on the sewer project. When there is, the public can be assured Fulton county will do its full share as in the past."

Dr. W. L. Gilbert, who retires today as chairman of the board, said "there is no occasion for Mr. Key or anyone else to make demands on the county. The county always is ready and willing and even anxious to assist in the development of city projects."

Will Vote Assistance.

Commissioner Gilbert said he would vote to give all the assistance needed to the sewer project.

Commissioner Paul S. Etheridge, head of the county works department, said that the county would furnish the labor and equipment needed. Declaring that he knew the remaining members of the board would agree with him, he said the county is ready to furnish all of the convicts and equipment needed for excavating, back-filling and kindred work.

Mr. Etheridge, Dr. Gilbert and Mr. Hendrix in discussing the subject pointed out that in many ways the county lends assistance to the city and whenever possible provides funds for the construction of municipal projects.

Commissioner Edward H. Inman

Alabama Stops Washington State's Greatest Back

Lainhart, elusive and powerful Cougar halfback, is shown in the Associated Press telephoto attempting to pick his way through Alabama's stone wall. He was the greatest offensive in the State backfield but he found Alabama impregnable. The picture shows Holley, Crimson substitute, ready to nail him and Captain Clements coming up as additional protection. The final score was: Alabama, 24; Washington State, 0.

ROSE BOWL, PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1.—Alabama's heavy infantry became a slashing, murderous troop of cavalry today to defeat the Washington State College football team 24 to 0 under cold, damp skies in the Rose Bowl. By winning, the Crimson Tide kept intact the south's record of never meeting defeat in the stadium in the lea of the lofty hills.

The men whose feet had thudded in ponderous, monotonous tread to a southern championship were metamorphosed under the leaden dripping clouds. They were agile, elusive, deceptive. They worked gridiron thaumaturgy to cut to pieces a gigantic red-garbed eleven from the mountains of Washington that had defeated every major eleven on the coast.

New Magicians.

Alabama forgot the old game of hammering and pounding. They handled the ball like magicians on carefully screened spin plays that completely fooled the tall men in red pants. They fired long forward passes from formations that were enigmas to the enemy.

Their line sledged wide gaps for the backs to travel in comfort. They showed the coast as dazzling an offensive as did Notre Dame a few weeks ago in beating Southern California.

Heroic Butchery.

Alabama scored three touchdowns and a field goal to compile the score. After a first period in which Coach Wade had his second stringers out softening the Cougars, the Tuscaloosa varsity went into action and worked heroic butchery in stowing the game safely away.

At a moment when it seemed that the powerful Cougar linemen would never yield an inch of ground, Quarterback Cain called Jimmy Moore, the end, into the backfield and the flaxen-haired boy shot a long arching 42-yard pass to Flash Suther for a touchdown. It was a long toss that Suther caught at about the 20-yard line, and he sprinted across without being touched. Campbell converted the point.

Almost immediately Moore again fired a 30-yard pass to Ben Smith while the enemy was pursuing Suther in another direction. That put the ball on the 2-yard line, and Campbell bucked it over on the first play. This point also Campbell converted.

And before the Cougars could recover from the shock, Monk Campbell, the spinner himself, broke through the line on a spin play that had them chasing wildly toward every man but him. Campbell loped 39 yards for the marker and for the third time converted the extra point.

And, on behalf of the second stringers who started the third period, "Ears" Whitworth, the camp comedian, kicked a field goal from the 26-yard line.

Washington State made but one serious bid. They carried the ball 76 yards in 10 plays in the fourth period against the Alabama varsity, but fumbled on the eleventh at the 5-yard line.

Washington State made 11 first downs to Alabama's six, excluding touchdowns, showing that the Cougars had no end of strength in the middle of the field. Yet they could not pene-

KIDNAPER FREES HEIR TO MILLIONS

Brewery Magnate's Grandson Returns Unharmed.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Adolphus Busch Orthwein, 13-year-old grandson of August A. Busch, president of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., and great-grandson of the late Adolphus Busch, multi-millionaire brewer, who was kidnaped by a negro New Year's Eve, was returned to his parents late today unharmed.

Henry Troll, an attorney, acting as spokesman for the family, declared no ransom was paid, although the family previously had announced they would pay a "generous reward" for the boy's return and would ask no questions.

"No reward was requested and none was paid," Troll said. "The only agreement made with the kidnaper was not to permit the boy to make a statement concerning his experience, and we intend to live up to the agreement."

Troll said he and a member of the family went to a designated spot in St. Louis county after the kidnaper had called by telephone this afternoon. They found the boy standing at the roadside and took him to the country home of his grandfather, August Busch, at Grant's farm, once occupied by the Civil War general.

"Here I am, and I am glad to be with you again," was the boy's greeting when rescued, Troll said. He was in good spirits but tired, and apparently had suffered no ill effects. He had not washed since he left home

ATTEMPTED JAIL BREAK THWARTED

Officers Discover City Jail Inmates Busily Sawing Steel Bars of Cells.

An attempted wholesale delivery at the city jail was thwarted shortly after 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon when policemen passing through the cell house observed two or three prisoners feverishly at work with hacksaws on bars of the cell block in which a number of state prisoners were confined.

Discovery of the attempt was made by Call Patrolmen M. O. Evans and E. H. Norwood, who happened to be passing through the lower part of the cell house. They summoned fellow officers and rushed into the tier to determine the identity of the would-be fugitives, but warning had been shouted by the prisoners, who threw down their saws and all denied knowledge of the attempt.

Police, however, singled out three prisoners as leaders in the attempted break, all of them held on serious charges. T. A. Coggins, who is awaiting extradition to Birmingham, where he is wanted for bank robbery; J. H. Baxter, sought by Virginia authorities for wife desertion, and Howard Johnson, arrested Thursday as a suspect in connection with more than a score of safe blowings in Atlanta and Birmingham, were believed by police to have been ring leaders in the affair. All denied complicity in the plot.

Just how the prisoners obtained the saws and blades was being investigated by authorities Thursday night. It was pointed out that had they remained undetected they would have opened a way into the office of Guy Lindsey, record clerk, and could easily have escaped through a window.

One Dead, 3 Injured In Baltimore Blaze

BALTIMORE, Jan. 1.—(AP)—One man was killed and three were injured as fire tonight destroyed the four-story brick plant of the Baltimore Post. Eighteen persons escaped down fire escapes and ladders, and six alarms rushed all available apparatus to the scene. The dead man was Joseph R. Douglass, a linotype operator, who jumped from the third floor.

An explosion in the basement, as a late edition was going to press, was believed responsible for the fire. Flames spread quickly through the old structure and ate their way through wooden stairways. Flames towered high into the sky and a heavy pall of smoke settled over the water front.

Greenblatt, 888 Ponce de Leon avenue, driver of the car which struck Mr. Hamilton, went to police headquarters and reported the accident, which he said was unavoidable, the newspaperman having walked out into the street from a darkened section of the block and the driver seeing him too late to avoid striking him. Belated Honeymoon Completed by Gilbert

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A man who postponed his honeymoon six years to pull a nation out of a financial morass was back from the honeymoon today ready to take his place as a partner in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan and Company at the age of 38.

Three days before S. Parker Gilbert sailed for Germany in 1924 to undertake one of the biggest financial assignments in all history as agent general for reparation payments, he hurried to Louisville, Ky., and married Miss Louise Ross Todd. They sailed and he went to work.

Last June when he returned from Berlin after the Bank of International Settlements had taken over his work, he was asked what he planned to do. He met all questions with the statement that he and Mrs. Gilbert were going on their honeymoon.

DOWNTOWN BLAZE WRECKS BUILDING

Five-Story Structure on Broad Street Calls Out 12 Fire Companies.

Four downtown business houses were destroyed and a five-story building in which they were located was wrecked by fire of mysterious origin Thursday morning. Assistant Fire Chief O. J. Parker and Lieutenant S. F. Anderson were painfully but not seriously injured fighting the blaze. The loss is estimated at between $85,000 and $100,000.

The blaze-gutted building was at Broad street and the viaduct and was owned by Mrs. Josephine Inman Richardson and managed by the Hugh Richardson Company. The stores destroyed were those of the Sunlite Electrik Bake Shop, a Piggly Wiggly grocery, an A&P store and a shop of the Garrow Candy Company.

The blaze is believed to have started in the basement of the bake shop, but the flames were so well under way before the first alarm was sounded firemen were unable to penetrate that section of the building to determine the origin. The first alarm was sounded at 9:54 a. m. and was answered by four companies. A few minutes later the second, third and fourth alarms were sounded, 12 companies in all responding.

Keep Long Watch.

To guard against the blaze breaking out again, Fire Chief John Terrell ordered firemen from several companies to remain at the scene until 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon. At that time, he said, everything had been thoroughly water-soaked, and there was little likelihood of the flames rekindling.

Two upper floor and the roof of the building suffered only slight damage, the chief pointed out. He said that his men were able tho save that much of the structure by using a large "water tower" more than 15 years old, which recently was repaired and put back into service after having been "junked" for about 10 years.

YOUTH CONFESSES TO 20 ROBBERIES

Detectives Say Howard Johnson Admits Long List of Crimes.

Police today will seek a bill of indictment against Howard Johnson, 22, of 410 McDaniel street, arrested Thursday by detectives who charged that he was attempting to steal a radio from a truck in the downtown area. Johnson will be charged with several safe-blowings and other acts of burglary, Lieutenant T. O. Sturdivant, who with Detective Frank C. Foster, arrested Johnson.

According to detectives, Johnson has made oral confession of safe robberies here and burglaries and other robberies in Birmingham that will total more than 20. Among local stores and places of business that he is said to have admitted burglarizing during the last three years, detectives said he named the Fulton, Pope and Mather furniture companies; the Grant, Lankford and Willys-Knight motor concerns and several places in Birmingham.

Sturdivant Thursday said that Johnson has a criminal record extending over the last 14 years, explaining that although he is only 22 years of age, he was placed in the reformatory at the age of seven, and that Johnson told the detective that since that time he has "been out" for Christmas only three times. Sturdivant also said the suspect had told him that he is an escaped convict from the chaingang at Nashville.

IL DUCE PLEDGES ITALY TO PEACE

In Radio Address to America Mussolini Vows Nation's Friendship.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini, speaking today for the first time to a great audience of American radio listeners in an international radio hookup, declared that Italy never would take the initiative of starting a war.

In a short, vigorous address that came through excellently, the noted fascist chieftain was emphatic in asserting that neither he nor his people desired another conflict of arms.

Pointing out that he himself had fought in the ranks and was seriously wounded, he asked how anyone with his experience as a man and a statesman could consider a future conflict without horror. So far as the training of fascist youth was concerned, he said, it was simply to make them strong, self-reliant and disciplined.

If the United States had not brought its weight to bear, the war would not have been won, he said, adding, "without their co-operation, the world cannot recover from the post war crisis and their help is necessary if prosperity is to return."

Premier Mussolini said Italy's trade relations with soviet Russia were valuable economically but did not affect internal politics.

Notwithstanding unemployment, peace and quiet prevailed throughout Italy, the duce assured his listeners, saying:

"Eight million men and women, representing the whole man-power and all the economic forces of the nation stand solidly behind facism."

He expressed confidence that the peace of the world would be preserved and that a new era of prosperity would dawn. In conclusion he paid his respects to President Hoover.

"I know that public opinion in America has watched recent developments in Italy. The movement we set going by reducing salaries so as to

150,000 WORKERS QUIT IN WALES COAL STRIKE

Number Out of Jobs in Affected Area Nearing 230,000 Mark.

CARDIFF, Wales, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Few wheels turned today in the great collieries of South Wales, where last night negotiations between miners, operators and government officials ended in a sort of combined strike and lockout.

One hundred and fifty thousand men are employed in the fields and most of them were idle today, although here and there small bodies of men went into the pits by special local agreements. As some workers already were idle because of industrial disputes, the number out of jobs in the area now ranges close to 230,000.

The trouble results from a dispute over both hours and wages. The miners hold out for a seven and one-half hour day in contrast to the eight previously worked, and this the employers are willing to grant if the men will take a one-sixteenth reduction in pay.

At this the miners federation balked and ordered the 150,000 men not to report for work today. The owners countered with an edict that the mines should be locked to all who refused to accept their wage reduction offer.

Meanwhile, the government has hopes that the strife may be settled at a meeting of the South Wales Conciliation board Saturday, where the grievances and claims of both sides will be weighed.

Unless some compromise is arranged, a bitterly hard winter would appear to be the prospect of the enormous South Wales field. The long economic depression virtually has exhausted the resources of the miners and with the new period of idleness there likely will be hunger and want.

So far no violence has been reported.

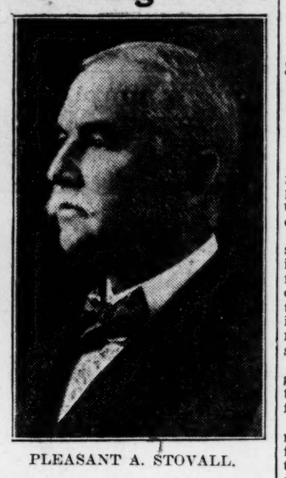
Stovall's Newspaper Bought By Savannah Morning News

HERSCHEL V. JENKINS.



PLEASANT A. STOVALL.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Announcement of the acquisition of the Savannah Press by the Savannah Morning News, was made here today by Pleasant A. Stovall, editor and publisher of the Press.

Mr. Stovall continues as editor of the Press. The editorial and other staffs of the Press remain unchanged.

The announcement said that within a few days the Savannah Press will be moved to and issued from the building of the Morning News.

Mr. Stovall's announcement, printed in today's issue of the Press, read in part as follows:

"With this issue the Savannah Press changes management. The paper has been sold to the Savannah Morning News. The building, plant, business, franchises and good will have been transferred to that corporation, and within a few days the Savannah Press will be issued from the Savannah Morning News building.

"The name of the Savannah Press will be maintained. While same mechanical outfits will be used, and the same building will house both papers, the Savannah Press will retain its own journalistic atmosphere, playing its own part in the work of developing greater Savannah and using all the force and influence it may have for promotion of every movement tending to advance the material welfare of the city and state or to encourage development of the higher things of life. The spirit that has guided it in the past will guide it in the future under its new ownership.

"The present editor of the Press will continue as its editor; father and son will be associated in the work. William G. Sutlive, managing editor, whose newspaper work is well known, will remain, with his son, John Sutlive, as city editor.

"T. S. Whitfield, and other trained members of the editorial, business and mechanical staff will continue their unbroken connection, gratifying recognition of their ability.

"In transferring ownership of the Savannah Press, it is fit that its former ownership should express sincere appreciation of the support of the paper from the business men of Savannah. The new owners have manifested a generous and liberal spirit in every way. It knows that this support will be continued. The temporary depression cannot obscure the fact this section is destined for marvelous development, and Savannah must share in the prosperity industrial diversification and expansion assures.

"This movement is similar to those which in different forms have happened in Asheville, where the Asheville Citizen and Asheville Evening Times combined under one plant; in Macon, where the Macon Telegraph and the Macon Evening News combined under one plant; in Columbus where the Columbus Enquirer-Sun and the Evening Ledger combined; in Charleston, where the Charleston News and Courier and Charleston Evening Post combined. This is the tendency of the times, and has been followed in progressive cities of the north and south."

Long Career of Morning News.

The Savannah Morning News was first published on Tuesday morning, January 15, 1850. John M. Cooper was publisher, and W. T. Thompson was editor. Its office was located at 117 Bay street, near the then new custom house, and was published daily and tri-weekly. It has always been a morning paper.

Colonel Thompson, its first editor, held that position until 1882. In June, 1867, Colonel John H. Estill purchased an interest in the paper and the following year bought out other interests, remaining in sole control until his death in 1907.

Frank G. Bell, who had served as business manager of the Morning News since 1886, succeeded Colonel Estill as president. He died on August 12, 1926, after 42 years with the paper, and was succeeded on December 13, 1926, by Herschel V. Jenkins, as publisher and president. Mr. Jenkins had been a railroad man prior to securing his interest in the paper and for 38 years was in the treasury department of the Central of Georgia Railway.

In 1926 the Morning News completed its new building as an annex to its plant facing Whitaker street at Bay street, and now occupies both buildings, modernly equipped.

It is credited with organizing the first system of special correspondents in the south and for several years was the only southern paper that kept a regular correspondent at Washington and New York the year round. In 1869 it introduced the first folding machine ever put to work in a daily newspaper office in Georgia. About the same time the machine for putting the addresses on papers was introduced into the Morning News office and was the first mailer used in Georgia, if not in the entire south.

Distinguished Men Served News.

It has sent out as graduates of its training some of the distinguished newspapermen of the country. Among them was "Uncle Remus," the great master of dialect and humor and pathos. The chair which Joel Chandler Harris used when a member of the editorial staff of the Morning News, is still in the Morning News office, labeled as the one he used.

In its equipment the Morning News has a feature also unique in public service, a town hall donated to the use of men's and women's organizations free of charge. The hall seats approximately 125 persons and has proved convenient for downtown meetings. There has also been space given the public library system of Savannah where it has housed its downtown branch for the convenience of businessmen more particularly, but where all classes of patrons of the public library could be served.

Officers of the Morning News are: Herschel V. Jenkins, president and business manager; Boykin Paschal, vice president and advertising manager; Walter R. Neal is editor, and James P. Miller is managing editor.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Hurtling from the rails on a curve at Bement, Ills., a passenger train on the Wabash early today crashed into the railroad station and set it in flames.

No passengers were severely hurt, but the engineer and the fireman were taken from the blazing cab of the locomotive in the debris of the station, scalded and otherwise injured.

FARMERS ARE WARNED TO PRACTICE ECONOMY

State College of Agriculture Urges Concentration on Profitable Acreage Only.

Concentration of Georgia's 1931 farm crops on profitable acreage to produce as cheaply as possible, is urged in the 1931 Agricultural Outlook of the state college of agriculture.

Warning that the present depression is worldwide in scope and that improvement in the domestic demand for agricultural products may not come to any appreciable extent until the end of 1931, the Outlook seeks to impress upon the farmers and businessmen of the state the need of conservatism.

One of the most pertinent paragraphs in the publication in reference to the situation faced by Georgia farmers this year said:

"The unfavorable credit situation makes it imperative that Georgia farmers plan their operations so as to require as little credit as possible and to exercise the utmost economy in the use of such credit resources as are available. There has probably never been a time when the farm production of food for the household and feed for the livestock was more important. The 1931 crop must be a cheap crop. Prices are low and no immediate improvement is in prospect."

In reference to cotton, the state's chief cash producing crop, the report cites the conditions in the market of 1930 when the reduction of world consumption of the staple came almost wholly in American cotton and that last month's report indicated a hold over of 1,200,000 bales more than existed during the 1929-30 season.

"The solution of the cotton problem," the report says, "lies in the hands of the cotton farmer. Small crops invariably bring more actual money than do large crops. While the Georgia farmers have reduced their acreage during the past decade, the acreage throughout the cotton belt has increased rapidly.

"Further acreage decrease by Georgit farmers is not necessarily a good policy, except by eliminating acres that will not give a profitable yield under present conditions.

"An increase in average yields and improvement in quality, furnish Georgia farmers their most certain means of maintaining their place in cotton production."

The tobacco grower is warned that if the acreage planted in 1930 is maintained in 1931, a "repetition of the disastrously low prices received in 1930 can be expected when the 1931 crop comes to market."

Increased production of oats, wheat, hay, hogs, beef cattle and dairying are urged in the outlook. More poultry and sheep are also needed, the Outlook said.

KELLOGG SEES '31 AS "REWARD" YEAR

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Jan. 1. (AP)—W. K. Kellogg, chairman of the board of the Kellogg Company, food manufacturers, today visioned 1931 as "a period that will bring the most exceptional rewards to virtually all sound and aggressive lines of business.

"For some months past the country as a whole has been going through a period of readjustment," Kellogg said. "Business generally has been forced to appraise itself, on the basis of neither depression nor boom, but in its relation to normal times. The consumer also is ready to put his money back to work.

"We especially expect to increase our expenditures in newspaper advertising," Kellogg said. "This medium provides the flexibility and concentration of shock troops and can be directed most effectively to building up any territories that may be low."

MISSISSIPPI TOWNS UNDER "HOLDOVERS"

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Municipalities in Mississippi that failed to hold general elections last November and where democratic primary elections were not called, were in charge of "hold-over" city officials today.

The "hold-over" administrations are to call elections this month at which new city officials are to be selected by the voters.

An oversight in checking the code of 1930, which went into effect November 1, resulted in some municipalities failing to hold elections during that month, officials being under the impression that the law for December elections had not been changed.

6,429 Persons Visit White House For Annual New Year's Handshaking

BY ROBERT S. PICKENS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—President and Mrs. Hoover shook hands today with 6,429 persons.

The White House doors were wide open from 11 o'clock in the morning until 3:30 in the afternoon and between those hours, with the exception of 45 minutes for lunch, the chief executive and first lady received and extended a steady stream of New Year's greetings.

The morning was given over to government and diplomats, but in the afternoon formality was thrown aside as 5,500 plain citizens paid their respects.

The line for the public reception formed early, so early that two persons, Charles Ruby and Arthur Demars, were invited in out of the cold and given breakfast.

President Hoover heard they were prepared to wait until 1 o'clock to shake his hand so he had them in at 7:40 o'clock, shook their hands and had them fed.

Ruby and Demars rather took the edge off the efforts of J. W. Hunefeld, middle-aged Washington painter, who was the first to be received at 1 o'clock. Hunefeld had led the line so often that he is known at the White House as the "professional first-in-liner."

The day of receiving began for President and Mrs. Hoover at 10:30 when the cabinet came to an upstairs sitting room to wish them a happy new year. At 11 o'clock the diplomatic corps was presented by Ambassador Tellez, of Mexico, dean of the corps.

The supreme court justices followed and next came the senate and house members. Approximately 1,000 officials of various rank were received during the morning.

Luncheon was a hasty meal for the Hoovers and the White House staff. The long line of people had by that time extended up Pennsylvania avenue and was abreast the state, war and navy building. The chief executive wanted the reception to begin as quickly as possible so the people could come in out of the cold.

Entering the great doors of the White House, the line passed through the wide corridor into the state dining room. From there it passed through the red room, into the blue room, where Mr. and Mrs. Hoover stood.

After shaking hands the people were shown into the east room, where they were allowed to stay as long as they wished. Heretofore they had been kept moving in line until they were out of the White House again.

Each person passing the president received a cordial and personal "Happy New Year," a wish echoed almost immediately by Mrs. Hoover.

The Marine band orchestra, under the leadership of Taylor Branson, played continuously, having been divided to function in relays. Branson was participating in his 27th New Year's White House reception.

CHIEF LILLY NAMES NEW DEKALB POLICE

Only One Member of Force Retained; "Strong Arm Methods" Must Go.

Following dismissal of six members of the DeKalb county police force by the newly appointed chief, A. W. Lilly, announcement was made Thursday of the selection of five new members, who, with C. L. Phillips, retained from the former force, and Chief Lilly will comprise the force of seven officers. The former size of the department had been nine policemen and a chief, and reduction was due to the economy plan of C. A. Matthews, new county commissioner.

Those appointed were announced by Chief Lilly as Ralph Abercrombie, Carl Mobley, George T. Young, Claude Ford and P. N. Turner.

"Strong-arm methods of the police of this county are over," Chief Lilly said, in commenting briefly on the "shake-up." "From now on officers are going to act as gentlemen. This does not mean a let-up in our efforts to prevent crime and run down criminals."

The officers dismissed were Acting Chief W. A. Rogers, Patrolmen O. B. Rowell, A. H. Smith, W. A. Carroll, E. Southard and Gus Hudgins.

The grand jury will convene today to arrange 1931 salaries for county employes and it is expected that its recommendations will follow the economy idea expressed by Commissioner Matthews in explaining the reason for several upheavals in county offices.

AMAZING POWERS OF NEW SARGON IS AGAIN PROVEN

Atlanta Woman Was on Verge of Breakdown. Thousands of Cases Bear Testimony To Sargon's Extraordinary Merits.

Many marvel at the speed with which Sargon, the new scientific compound, solves their health problems that had defied all other medicines and treatments. Acting as it does upon the entire system, steadying overwrought nerves and strengthening and invigorating failing organs of the body, this amazing preparation has lifted thousands from the throes of despondency and suffering to the joy of new-found health. Read the grateful statement made recently by Mrs. W. A. Moore, 806 Tift Ave., S. W., Atlanta, who said:

"During the past year I have been right on the verge of a nervous breakdown. The least little thing would upset me and at times I felt like I wanted to scream out. I lost my appetite completely and when I did force myself to eat, the food just seemed to stay in a lump in my stomach. I'd get so dizzy and nauseated sometimes I'd have to go to bed. My bowels were also badly constipated and nothing I tried seemed to get me regulated right.

"Six bottles of Sargon have made me feel like a new woman. I have a wonderful appetite now and eat anything I want without any bad effects. It has steadied my nerves; gotten me over that dizziness and made me feel brimful of energy and pep.

"The Sargon Pills keep my bowels in perfect condition without nauseating or upsetting me in the least. I feel that I would be neglecting my duty if I wasn't willing to tell everyone I can about this wonderful treatment."

The merits of Sargon are being explained to the public by the Sargon Man at Jacobs' Main Store, 48 Broad St. Sargon may be obtained at all Jacobs' Stores.—(adv.)

Tons of Water Poured Into Blazing Building

Twelve fire companies were called out Thursday to battle a blaze which gutted the five-story building on Broad street at the southwest end of the viaduct. Above is shown a remarkable photograph of six of the nearly 30 streams turned on the flames by the fire department. Three forcible streams are being emitted from the department's big water tower while firemen are seen in Broad street manning three more. The photo is by Kenneth Rogers of The Constitution staff.

"Firsts" of 1931 Provide Many Items of Interest for Atlanta

Completion of records for 1930 and first entries of various occurrences in the new 1931 ledgers by city and county officials Thursday brought to light many items of interest to Atlantans on New Year's Day. Among these were numerous "firsts" of the new year, ranging from birth, death, accident and arrest, and included the following:

During the year just ended city detectives recovered stolen property valued at $659,693, including 2,399 automobiles.

Sentences totaling 566 years were meted out to 296 automobile thieves arrested during 1930.

Burglary arrests numbered 169 and sentences imposed aggregated 677 years.

Highway robbery suspects taken in custody numbered 47, and penalties for those convicted totaled 443 years. There were 13 men arrested for safe-cracking and sentences totaled 151 years.

Solicitor-General John A. Boykin; Beaumont Davison, prominent businessman, and Mell R. Wilkinson, celebrated New Year's as birthday anniversaries.

Two-thirds, or approximately $600,000 of DeKalb county's 1930 taxes have been paid, it was announced by W. H. Bond, tax commissioner.

Mrs. J. T. White, 19, of 208 McDonough road, became Atlanta's "first mother" when a daughter was born to her a few minutes after midnight Thursday.

Miss Edna Earl Lloyd, 16, 711 Kalb street, was the first casualty, being struck in the eye by a "ball" from a roman candle.

A child, Warren Etheridge, was the first mortality, dying of meningitis just after midnight.

E. F. Williams, Egan Park grocer, was the first automobile mortality, having been instantly killed Thursday morning when his car turned over on Whipple avenue near Candler field.

W. H. Cowan attained the distinction of being the first person arrested when he was locked up during a celebration that police charged was too enthusiastic.

A total of 3,469 fire alarms were answered by the fire department during the year.

BOARD OF EDUCATION REORGANIZES TODAY

The Atlanta board of education will convene in council chamber at 3 o'clock this afternoon for its annual reorganization session, during which a president and first vice president will be elected.

Although no member of the board would predict the outcome, it generally was believed that Dr. W. W. Gaines, president, who was elected to fill the post vacated by the resignation several months ago of Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, would be the choice of the board for the executive post. The name of W. C. Slate, veteran member, also was mentioned prominently as a prospective first vice president.

R. R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent of Atlanta schools in charge of business administration, will present the 1931 budget figures to the meeting, but Thursday Mr. Ritchie declined to intimate any divisions of the budget prior to the official gathering.

Only one change will be effected in the old membership of the board, it was said, that being the seating of H. J. Penn to succeed J. W. Maddox, from the fifth ward.

The following new members also will be seated:

Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, sixth ward; Noah Baird, seventh, and John P. Hancock, eighth.

It seemed assured that Mrs. Fannie Mae Weston, incumbent secretary, and F. M. Berry, treasurer, would be re-elected.

HENRY T. RICHARDS DIES OF WAR ILLS

Illness contracted during the World War proved fatal Wednesday to Henry T. Richards, native Atlantan, and former employe in the offices of the Atlanta Joint Terminals. Mr. Richards died in the government hospital at Fort Bayard, New Mexico. The body will be sent to Atlanta for funeral services and interment, arrangements to be announced later.

Upon the entrance of the United States into the war, Mr. Richards, who was manager of the Goodrich Tire Company at Nashville, enlisted in the navy. Tuberculosis contracted during his term of service necessitated his removal to the hospital, where he spent the last years of his life.

Mr. Richards was a 32d degree Mason and a member of the Shrine at Memphis. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. W. E. Williams, of Jacksonville, and a sister, Mrs. Theo S. Lewis, of Atlanta.

MACHINE GUN FIRE TURNS BACK REBELS

RANGOON, Burma, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Machine gun fire turned back 500 rebels in a fight at Pashegyan, in the Tharawaddy district, today, as the natives emerged from the jungle from three sides to engage the Burmese and Kachin rifles.

Ten of the rebels were killed and five wounded. The British forces drove them back into the forest, capturing a red banner and setting fire to quantities of stores the rebels had gathered.

FATHER OF MRS. HUME DIES IN CALIFORNIA

Oliver P. Arnold, of Riverside, Cal., father of Mrs. John A. Hume, of Atlanta, died early Thursday morning after a brief illness. Funeral services will be held at Riverside Saturday. In addition to Mrs. Hume, he is survived by his widow, two others daughters, Mrs. Russell Krinard, Miss Annie Arnold, and four sons, Oliver P. Arnold, Jr., Edward W., James and Joe Arnold, all of Riverside.

REALTY MEN DISCUSS PROPERTY TAX TODAY

Discussion of property taxes in Georgia will feature a joint meeting of the newly-elected officers and directors of the Georgia Real Estate Association and the association's special taxation committee, scheduled for 11 o'clock this morning at the Atlanta Real Estate Board's office.

The session has been called by President John J. Thompson, of Atlanta. It was pointed out that the early summoning of the new officers of the state realty organization was prompted by Governor Hardman's decision to hold an extra session of the state legislature.

It is understood that the association tax committee's recently compiled report will be made public and discussed at this time and that plans will be laid for representing the property interests of the state at the forthcoming extra session of the legislature.

Four general complaints contained in the tax committee's report against what is called "the iniquitous burden of taxes on property," contend the situation is reducing the number of home owners in disastrous degree; resulting in foreclosures by the thousands of farm and city property so that foreign-owned mortgage and insurance companies will eventually own a large percentage of Georgia property; bringing about a heavy shrinkage in the value of real estate, and driving Georgia money into foreign stocks and securities by the millions.

VICTIM OF MYSTERY ATTACK STILL IN COMA

Police Are Puzzled by Assault on 70-Year-Old J. B. Wallace.

While police Thursday endeavored to ascertain the manner in which J. B. Wallace, 70, of 289 Washington street, S. W., was beaten while in his room at that place early Thursday morning, the victim of the baffling assault Thursday night remained in an unconscious condition at Grady hospital, his skull fractured and his head battered, apparently, by terrific blows.

Wallace, police were told, was discovered Thursday morning by his landlady. He was said to have been standing in front of a mirror in a dazed condition, attempting to adjust his collar and tie. Mrs. Willie Viola Copeland, who occupies a near-by room, said that she heard sounds in Wallace's room early Thursday morning, but attributed it to the movement of some article of furniture.

Police were seeking a roommate of the elderly man, merely for questioning, it was said, to see whether any light could be thrown upon the assault.

SAVANNAH PAPERS MERGE.

Of southwide interest is the announcement that the Savannah Morning News has purchased the Savannah Press, and that both newspapers will be housed and printed in the News building. This move is in line with recent developments in newspaper publishing not only in other parts of the country, but in Georgia, where in the past year, the Telegraph, Macon's morning newspaper, purchased the Macon Evening News, and the Columbus Enquirer-Sun and the Columbus Ledger were brought under the same ownership.

As in the mergers in Macon and Columbus, the Morning News and the Press will each retain its identity. Pleasant A. Stovall will continue as editor of the Press and W. R. Neal as editor of the News. Herschel V. Jenkins, president, publisher and business manager of the News, becomes executive head of the two newspapers.

That the move will strengthen both newspapers is assured, and Mr. Stovall, who was the first editor to give Savannah a successful afternoon newspaper, feels that the new combination is founded on sound business principles. On this point, after referring to similar movements, he says in a statement issued Thursday:

"This is the tendency of the times, and has been followed in progressive cities of the north and south. It will be the mission of the Savannah Press, under new ownership, to play its part in promoting public confidence in Savannah. The spirit that has guided it in the past will guide it in the future under its new ownership. The new owners have manifested a generous and liberal spirit in every way."

The foregoing statement is a measure of the spirit which has animated Colonel Stovall's long and successful journalistic career, which has, it is to be hoped, many years ahead. His impression on Georgia journalism has been marked. With the exception of the period he served as United States minister to Switzerland during the administration of Woodrow Wilson, his newspaper work has been uninterrupted. Mr. Stovall received his first newspaper training on the Athens Banner. From Athens he went to Augusta, where he became editor of the Chronicle when Patrick Walsh was its publisher. After several years experience in Augusta Mr. Stovall in 1891 joined with David Robinson in establishing the Savannah Press. Very soon Mr. Stovall became sole owner and editor.

Herschel V. Jenkins, president and publisher of the Savannah News, who becomes also publisher of the Press, while comparatively new in the field of journalism, has earned the reputation of an excellent executive and a business man of striking ability. He succeeded the late Frank G. Bell as publisher of the Morning News and quickly proved his business acumen as a newspaper executive. Mr. Jenkins not only has been active in civic enterprises, but is a director of the Citizens and Southern National bank, president of the Farmers Loan bank, president of the Morris Plan bank and a director of the Savannah Chamber of Commerce. To his success in these various fields he has added that of a successful newspaper manager; that he will continue this success in his capacity as publisher of two newspapers, none will question.

It can be said with certitude that with Herschel V. Jenkins and Pleasant A. Stovall working in double harness, Savannah's newspaper needs will be amply cared for.

REPEAL AND RELIEF.

During December conferences were held in Washington by the leaders of dry and wet organizations to consider prohibition conditions and to adopt some policy, on the one hand to secure fuller enforcement and on the other hand to promote the repeal of the prohibition amendment or a liberalization of the Volstead act.

The results were much talk, much resoluting and much mutual denunciation, but the appearance of no persuasive program from either crowd. And no feasible program can be expected from either of those fanatical factions.

The people of the nation who are suffering from the aggravated evils of unenforceable prohibition must express that powerful public sentiment which moves government and commands reform. The unafraid parts of the public press, the conscientious preachers who do not fear to deal with facts, the frank publicists who would rather be right than to hold some measley office, and the business leaders who have the courage to tell the people the truth, must create and make vocal the public sentiment for a new and sober order in our civilization.

All such persons now know that congress and the states made a tremendous moral, social and political mistake in proposing and adopting the prohibition amendment to the national constitution. Nobody can honestly deny that it has been producing frightful evils in all those lines of our national life since it became operative. And in spite of many millions of expense, a great force of agents, a holocaust of murders and overflowing prisons in every state of the Union, the criminal curse grows greater daily instead of less.

We are now in the day when we must admit that there is no wisdom, philosophy or device known to our legislators and administrators by which the national liquor afflictions can be met and cured until we begin with a wiser and more workable policy than that under which we are now operating.

It is a great disillusionment and disappointment of millions of good American people that the prohibition amendment scheme, which thundered so promisingly in the index, has failed so dismally in the full text. They are frankly admitting the failure and are ready to seek a surer road to temperance and a nation purged of the crimes and corruptions of ineffective prohibition.

There is little to be gained by waiting to see whether one or both the political parties will offer to effectuate the needed repeal of the prohibition amendment and the enactment of enforceable liquor laws. The thing to do is obviously to tackle the great problem in the congressional districts at the first occasion and send men to the national legislature with each of them mandated by the public sentiment of his constituents. In that way only can the people hope to get speedy and safe deliverance from the prevailing evils of fake prohibition.

REDUCE THE ARMIES.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, through Elihu Root and other of its officials, calls the attention of the signatories of the Versailles treaty to their obligation under it to reduce their armaments for war purposes.

In the 11 years since the treaty was signed and represented to the world as the long-desired "Pact of World Peace," nearly all the nations other than the United States have been expanding rather than reducing their war armaments. Germany, of course, was thoroughly disarmed by the victorious associated powers and hog-tied against growing another huge standing army.

Now honorable, truce-keeping men in all nations are urging that the governments that signed the Versailles treaty should keep it in terms and in fact by reducing their war armaments.

It is easily calculable that much of the economic distress in Europe is due to the costs and non-productive uses of tax money for these useless armaments. The billions that the kaiser spent to build up his war machine that brought the ruin of himself and his empire, spent upon the industries of his nation, would have long ago won "Deutchland uber alles" in the commerce of the world.

The money spent on huge armies is the heaviest taxation that any people has to endure.

Those insurgent senators sitting on committee limbs are not sawing between themselves and the tree.

American business would have great chances to recover and prosper again if there were not a presidential campaign a year and a half ahead.

Another "last bodyguard of Lincoln" has just died. Very soon now there should be actually no more of them left

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Doctor Stresemann.

Heavy body, square shoulders, straight back. Big eyes, glassy, cow-like, pink complexion, large sensual mouth, thick chin. Prominent, fleshy nose—symbol of his stubborn will and perseverance. A glistening skull rising above the short bull neck like the dome of the Invalides which all his life he had the greatest longing to visit. This is the way the late Dr. Stresemann is described by his secretary, Antonina Vallentin, who has just published a portrait of the German statesman. The book is already being translated into English and will soon be on the American market.

This is how Miss Vallentin describes the first meeting between Stresemann and Briand at Locarno. "The typical exponents of two races, two representatives of two different worlds come face to face. . . . The German, with his round, gleamy skull, very correctly garbed in a dark suit, painfully clean, shiny stiff collar, straight as a sword, somewhat awkward in his gestures, metallic voice, long, clear, proofread sentences. . . . Opposite him the Frenchman, rounded back, hair negligently combed, disorderly moustache half veiling his sensitive mouth, heavy lids drooping over half-closed eyes, ironical, amused, an eye that undresses all men and all things, deep, rich, warm voice, an entire orchestra of sounds and tones. . . . Looks more like a Montparnasse artist, discussing world problems and drinking vin blanc. . . . A man without caste prejudices, without traditions and stiff principles, devoid of all the dignity traditionally attached to the post. . . . A man seated there, one so strong that he could afford to be nothing but a man . . ."

After being denounced a traitor to his country, Stresemann was suddenly proclaimed its savior. The preparations for the celebration of his 50th birthday were almost like the prelude to a national holiday. Stresemann was in bed, seriously ill. The disease had made terrific progress. Only very few people had an idea of how serious his condition was then, at the urgent request of Secretary of State Kellogg, he boarded the train for Paris to take part in the final ceremonies of the signing of the famous pact. Briand was there to greet him. Briand who had become his friend.

The ceremonies concluded, Stresemann descended the broad marble staircase of honor at the Quai d'Orsay, walked through the lines of cabinet ministers, his body still erect, but his face of an appalling greenish pallor, convulsed with pain. Looking at him for the last time, his sad eyes veiled by a shadow of profound grief, Briand was heard to murmur: "Je l'aime bien, le docteur . . . je l'aime bien . . ."

Stresemann's last task was to get the political parties to ratify the Young plan. It was his hardest. His own party was opposed to the treaty. The conference dragged out interminably. He faced a wall of cold, hostile indifference. He wrangled with the leaders. He stormed and fought with them. He pleaded and cajoled. With the last vestige of strength he possessed he summoned all his resources, employed every trick, every wile which he had learned, played on them with all his skill and subtlety. Finally he won them over. He always did. "But this time it was hard," he confessed to his wife as he went to bed, tired, smiling.

He died during the night.

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

THE REVOLT OF THE BABIES. NO. 6—GIVING THE BABY A RUB ON THE CHEST.

A mother writes:

In answer to your rub-on-the-chest talk I can't help saying I wonder what mothers who don't rub on the chest would do if they lived nine miles from the nearest doctor and had no money for doctor bills and no car to go to the doctor with, for every cold and fever.

I have two children, 4 and 3 years old and they have all kinds of spells that onions and camphorated oil doctored them over.

We country mothers must depend on our own doctoring, as we don't have a doctor next door to call in on short notice.

So far as the onions go—and boy, they go far—there is no objection to the method of this mother. But the camphorated oil is not entirely harmless. It is a fine old reliable household remedy, and I'd prefer to depend on it if my own child were ill, rather than use any of the nostrums urged upon the laity for such purposes. Still, in the case of a young infant, where a too lavish use of camphorated oil is made, there is a chance of camphor poisoning. For that reason, as well as the general comfort of the sick child and the child's attendants, it is better when applying camphorated oil to the chest, throat or over the bridge of the nose, to wipe away the excess before dressing the child again or putting on the nightdress. It is unnecessary, and a little dangerous, to leave the young infant's clothing or bed covers saturated with camphorated oil, for that means that the baby will inhale some camphor at every breath, and in the course of a night or a day this may be sufficient to intoxicate the child, to cause camphor poisoning. That is not necessarily fatal, but it does no good.

There are many other things offered for rubbing on the chest, for bronchitis, coughs and other respiratory troubles; but I doubt there is anything better for this purpose than camphorated oil, nor for applying to the neck for the relief of sore throat and hoarseness or laryngitis, nor for rubbing over the bridge of the nose for acute coryza. Note I say nothing about "colds," not knowing just what a "cold" may be.

A mother should prepare camphorated oil freshly when needed, by crumbling an ounce of camphor gum into fine pieces and putting them in a bottle with four ounces of hot "sweet oil," olive oil or cottonseed oil, until dissolved. Keep the bottle tightly corked, as camphor evaporates if it stands unused for a time. The proper name for this camphorated oil is camphor liniment, and it is in fact a very good liniment for application in any case of soreness or lameness where a liniment is desired. Indeed, I believe it will accomplish all that any pretentious nostrum of that type can do for such soreness or lameness.

STORE CLERK KILLS MASKED ROBBER

ROCK HILL, S. C., Jan. 1.—Frank Steele, about 20, was shot to death Thursday night when he and a younger brother, wearing masks and carrying shotguns, attempted to rob a Rogers grocery store here.

Roy Parks, store manager, grabbed a pistol and started firing. Frank Steele fell fatally wounded. His brother, T. J., fled but later was arrested.

Teach a Bear Cub To Steal Honey and The Grown Bear Will Rob Your Hives

By Robert Quillen

This is the story, in few words, of the greatest adventure in modern history. It should interest every American, for it may affect every American.

Picture a great nation with an area and a population greater than our own; ruled by a despot; its great estates and natural resources controlled by a greedy nobility; the majority of its people oppressed, ignorant, poor and drunken; its exports limited to farm products and raw materials; depending on other nations for its luxuries and manufactured articles; its resources undeveloped; its railroads few; its way of life primitive except in great cities.

Now imagine this great nation, following a revolution, controlled by a few men in the name of socialism—its despot and its nobility slain; its cultivated people butchered or driven away; the lands and properties of the rich confiscated; its churches closed and its children taught to scorn religion; its new rulers using newspapers, magazines, school books and the radio to win the hearts of the people and persuade them to support the great adventure.

The great adventure was called Piatiletka. It meant a plan to modernize and industrialize the nation in five years—to build railroads, harness water power, build factories to make farm tractors and other machinery, and thus prepare the nation not only to supply its own needs but to grow rich by selling its products to the world.

No other people ever attempted a task so great.

An army was needed to suppress malcontents. It was enlisted, equipped and trained. Credit was needed; capital was needed; engineers and experts were needed. All were found—America furnishing the larger share.

Two years have gone by. Great hydro-electric plants are in use or nearing completion; new railroads are operating; tractors are doing the work on great government and co-operative farms—one of them 40 miles across; machines in factories are making other machines.

Yet the people stand in line to buy their allowance of food, and few have enough of anything. They must tighten their belts because freight cars that might haul milk or fruit are needed to haul building material. They must eat black bread because wheat must be sold abroad to pay for machinery.

"Endure a few more years," they are told, "and then the plan will be complete and all shall have plenty."

They endure—some sullenly, because they fear a firing squad; some cheerfully, because they think they are free people working for themselves.

Russians call the plan socialism—communism—a utopian arrangement whereby the people own everything and all work for the common good.

Actually the rulers are despots; the people work for masters whom they must obey if they would live.

Now the land exports wheat to pay for machinery. When it exports manufactured goods—when the nation becomes one vast factory, under centralized, despotic control, underselling competitors in the markets of the world, then free people everywhere must compete with a harnessed horde for the right to live.

number of companies was credited Thursday night with having kept the damage as low as it was. For more than three hours the men battled against the ravaging flames and smoke, and though repelled in every effort to reach the heart of the blaze they succeeded in keeping it confined to the one building. Department officials warmly praised the men for their good work and general coolness.

The top three floors of the burned structure were used as storerooms by the business concerns operating on the street floor and were otherwise unoccupied. Because of the holiday, only a few persons, chiefly employes, were in any of the business houses and all escaped without injury.

Arthur B. McElroy, manager of the Piggly Wiggly store, said Thursday night that the entire basement of the building was in flames before any one in either of the four stores knew of it.

"Within two minutes after we first saw the smoke coming from the basement, flames began to shoot up the elevator shaft and up the stairway," he said. "I started downstairs to investigate, but the fire forced me back. I couldn't get anywhere near it. I realized that the fire was going to be severe so I went to the cash register, emptied it and then ordered everyone to leave the store. The fire department took command about that time and we never had a chance to get near the basement again."

The fire attracted thousands of spectators and proved one of the most spectacular seen here in years. Firemen mounted the roofs of nearby buildings and poured stream after stream of water into the blazing structure. In all 30 hose were played on the building and it took nearly four hours to extinguish the flames. Chief of Police James L. Beavers ordered all patrolmen in the downtown section to the scene and the entire area was placed inside fire lines to keep the crowds back. All traffic was routed off of Broad, Alabama and Forsyth streets. Scores watched the flames from the roofs of nearby buildings while thousands lined the Forsyth and Whitehall viaducts.

Shortly before noon falling glass struck Assistant Chief Parker and Lieutenant Anderson. Parker being cut severely about the hands and Lieutenant Anderson receiving lacerations about the face. Both were given medical attention, but they refused to leave the scene of the fire until it was certain that the flames were under control.

Both Chief Parker and Fire Chief John Terrell who personally directed the fight on the fire refused to make any estimate of the loss, but it was unofficially placed at between $85,000 and $100,000. The entire stock and fixtures of the bake shop, the two groceries and the candy store were destroyed, the first floors of all four business houses caving in. For a time it was feared that the Wall street wall of the building would crumble. So intense was the heat from the burning building that heavy plate glass windows in business houses across Broad street were cracked.

Plan To Rebuild.

Hugh Richardson, Jr., manager of Richardson properties, likewise refused to fix any estimate of the damage. He said the Richardson company undoubtedly would reconstruct the building immediately.

"It may be that the replacement will not be as large as the building that burned, but the property will be reimproved at once," Mr. Richardson said.

The building destroyed Thursday was built in 1892 by Hugh T. Inman, who purchased the site from the city of Atlanta for $29,000. In 1907 Mr. Inman deeded the property to his daughter, Mrs. Richardson. The first transfer of the property on the records of the Atlanta Title & Trust Co. shows that in 1845 the entire block in which the building was located was sold for $175.

From 1860 until 1892, when the property was sold to Mr. Inman, the city had a fire station on it, for a number of years it being used as headquarters of the department. It was in 1892 that the city built the present fire headquarters during the administration of Mayor W. A. Hemphill and the property passed on to Mr. Inman for improvement.

Thursday were those in which an A&P store at Peachtree and Fourteenth streets was broken into and $12 worth of cigarets stolen, and the theft of $30 from Miss Hilda Spear, 1355 Lucile avenue, S. W., by a prowler who escaped.

Detective Foster, it was announced, will leave today for Miami, Fla., where he will seek the extradition to Atlanta of Clarence Hicks, alleged by officers to have acted as "fence" for stolen goods taken from highway robbery victims by a gang of alleged bandits who were taken in custody in a general roundup about two weeks ago.

HINDENBURG SUPPORTS REPARATIONS CHANGE

German President Says Bruening Government Position Is Right.

BERLIN, Jan. 1.—(UP)—President Paul Von Hindenburg started the New Year by adding his authoritative voice to Germany's demand for revision of the Young plan.

He coupled the demand with insistence on worldwide disarmament and, although he omitted specific mention of Poland, urged the energetic protection of German minorities living in foreign countries.

The president's pronouncement came in response to Wilhelm Groener, minister of defense, who in the absence of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, delivered the cabinet's New Year wishes to the chief executive.

"I entirely agree with the government's position," Von Hindenburg said. "I am aware that a serious situation has arisen as a result of the profound change in international economic conditions since we decided to adopt the new reparations plan.

"I believe the reich's government's foremost task is to devote its whole energy to avoiding disturbance of the moral and social foundation of the life of the German people." The president declared the demand for general disarmament was based on Germany's just rights under the treaty of Versailles.

"I also agree," he said, "that general disarmament is demanded by Germany not only as an act of international justice to Germany, but as the surest means of securing real, universal peace. It must therefore be sought with all available energy.

"The government has my full approval and support in its caring for Germans in foreign lands and in its insistence on the observance of international agreements for the protection of German minorities."

Ernest S. Williams Killed Under Auto

Pinned beneath his car which overturned on Whipple avenue near Candler field at 11:15 o'clock Thursday, Ernest S. Williams, 38, of Egan Park, was fatally injured, dying an hour later at Grady hospital, according to reports by police. Mr. Williams, who suffered a fractured skull, was seen by motorists traveling at a fast rate of speed on Whipple avenue on the outskirts of College Park, and police were told that one of the front tires of his machine blew out, causing it to overturn on a sharp curve.

Funeral services, which are under the direction of Brandon and Williams, have not been completed, it was said.

COUNTY IS READY TO HELP BOROUGH IN SEWER PROJECT

joined other members of the board in promising his co-operation on the sewer project.

"Whenever the mayor calls upon the board for assistance in the matter of men and equipment, I am ready to vote to give him that assistance," Mr. Inman said. "Whenever he calls on the board for funds I am ready to give him the funds if they are available and the work is needed. The sewer project is one of our most important pending improvements and I feel sure that the county board will be unanimous in assisting Mr. Key."

IL DUCE PLEDGES ITALY TO PEACE

secure a balanced budget has been successful, for retail prices have fallen.

"On this occasion the corporative state has given striking proof of its efficiency for all categories of our people—manufacturers, workers, farmers, employes.

"Unemployment is causing anxiety in Italy as in all other countries. We have half-million unemployed at the present time, of whom 100,000 are women and 250,000 come fram agriculture and the building trades where seasonal unemployment prevails. I am opposed to the dole. I prefer relief in the form of public works which substantially increase the efficiency of our national economic equipment. The dole tends the worker to idleness.

"But notwithstanding unemployment, peace and quiet prevail throughout the country and among all classes.

"All reports to the contrary are false. Eight million men and women—all the manpower and all the economic forces of the nation—stand solid behind fascism.

"No other regime in Europe rests on such broad and solid foundations.

"The American people should believe in our friendship and in our earnest desire to be at peace with all the nations of the world.

"I am confident that the peace of the world will be preserved and that before long a new era of prosperity will dawn; and in this assurance I bid goodbye to those who have listened to my message, and beg to present my cordial respects to the president of your great republic."

H. C. HAMILTON DIES WHEN HIT BY AUTO

less driving and released on his own recognizance.

Mr. Hamilton, who had been in ill health for some time, was released from a hospital only last week. Friends Thursday night advanced the opinion that he did not see the car coming or was suffering a recurrence of the illness which necessitated hospital treatment last week.

"Ham" as he was known here and in many other cities in which he worked, was born 39 years ago near Joplin, Mo., where his father still resides. Immediately after leaving school he went to St. Joseph, Mo., where he got a job as cub reporter on the St Joseph Gazette, working under Barry Faris, now assistant general manager of the International News Service. He worked on the Gazette in various minor capacities until he was promoted to sports editor. A few years later when Mr. Faris went to the I. N. S. he took Mr. Hamilton along.

After several years with International, Mr. Hamilton joined the Chicago staff of the United Press. Later he worked on a number of leading newspapers in New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis and other cities. He came to Atlanta about eight years ago as sports editor of The Constitution and remained until 1927 when he left to join the staff of The Georgian.

Mr. Hamilton is survived by his widow, Mrs. Belle Hamilton and two daughters, Doris 11 and Margaret 9. Funeral arrangements will be announced later by J. Austin Dillon Co.

ALLEGED BANK BANDIT HELD IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—(AP)—After an all-night search, police captured Owen Cauche today at his home as a suspect in the murderous holdup yesterday of the third district branch of the Whitney Trust and Savings bank.

Cauche denied an implication in the holdup, saying that he jumped from the police car after his arrest yesterday because he did not want to go to jail.

Police continued to gather in underworld characters. Harold Normandale, who has been arrested more than any other man in New Orleans, was arrested after a fight with the police.

While the police were searching for suspects, A. W. Brownson, the wounded cashier, was fighting for his life in a hospital from a pistol wound in the body.

Three men lost their lives as a result of the bandit's raid on the bank, Pierre N. Rizan, bank guard, and Gilbert Dietrich, depositor, being shot down in the bank while Claude Cefalu, a bandit suspect, was killed in a police car in a struggle with a detective for possession of the officer's pistol.

Club To Safeguard Pedestrians Formed

About 75 citizens of the Center Hill and adjacent communities met Thursday night at the Center Hill Masonic temple and formed a permanent organization to be known as the "Center Hill Safety Club." The purpose of the organization is to safeguard the lives of pedestrians along the streets and highways, none of which have sidewalks or street lights.

Within the past month there have been two fatalities on the Bankhead highway within a quarter of a mile of each other. Both these tragedies occurred after dark and were committed by hit-and-run drivers. Aside from the fatalities there have been a number of serious accidents within the past six months.

Officers of the new organization are: E. E. Redd, president; R. W. Baker, vice president; J. T. Sessions, secretary and treasurer, and J. G. Harrison, corresponding secretary.

A committee composed of Rev. W. S. Wier, W. S. Miller, W. L. Alexander, J. G. Harrison, R. E. Wells, Ben C. McGee, and W. D. Newman was appointed to draw up by-laws and make recommendation for definite safety plans.

FORMER DECATUR MAN DIES IN MIAMI

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 1.—(AP)—J. H. Gunn, 44, local manager for a New York investment concern, died here suddenly tonight from what physicians said was pneumonia. He formerly lived in Decatur, Ga.

CAPITAL GIRL'S DEATH BAFFLES AUTHORITIES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The diary of Miss Beulah Limerick, 19, in whose brain a bullet was found yesterday after she had been pronounced dead from natural causes, today was examined by police seeking a clue.

Five men, acquaintances of the girl, and two of her brothers were being held for investigation. All denied knowledge of any shooting. Police said they expected to arrest other persons soon.

An unidentified person telephoned a hospital early yesterday and reported a girl dying at Miss Limerick's home. Dr. Lyman Greene, dispatched in an ambulance, found the body lying upon a cot in a ground floor room and pronounced death due to natural causes. He said no evidence of a struggle was found.

The girl's hair was said to have been arranged over the wound and the bullet in her head was not discovered until several hours later by the undertaker.

He was dead before an ambulance could be summoned. The other negro was held on a charge of murder. Keene is survived by his widow and two children, four and two years old respectively. He was a native of this state.

PSYCHOLOGIST RAPS RELIGIOUS TRAINING

Fails To Keep Boys Out of Trouble, Says G. R. Mursell.

BY F. B. COLTON.
Associated Press Science Writer.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 1.—(AP) A psychologist's conclusion that religious training "has no significant relation" to delinquency was presented to the American association for the advancement of science today.

Three zoologists reported a better understanding of the health of women through the isolation of three hormones, which are secretions of the ductless glands.

Boys apparently are just as likely to get into trouble when they have had religious training as when they have not had it, said George H. Mursell, chief psychologist of the Ohio state department of public welfare.

Under religious training he included the amount of attendance of church and Sunday school, knowledge of the Bible, general attitude toward religion and knowledge of the difference between right and wrong. The information was gained through tests given to about 600 boys in an Ohio reform school and 400 boys outside. Both groups ranged in age from 12 to 18.

"It seems safe to conclude," Mr. Mursell said, "that there is no significant relation between religious training and delinquent or non-delinquent behavior—that whatever causes one to be delinquent or non-delinquent, it is not religious training, knowledge, attitudes or background, as measured by these tests."

The discovery dealing with health of women was reported by F. L. Hisaw, H. L. Fevolb and R. K. Meyer of the department of zoology in the University of Wisconsin.

They found that previously-known corpus luteum hormones can be split into three specific secretions, each having a special function and definite chemical properties.

An explanation of failure of some "rejuvenation" of youth treatments developed in new Hormone findings reported by Professor Cal R. Moore and Miss Dorothy Price, of the University of Chicago.

They learned that part of the pituitary, which is one of the ductless glands in the head, acts as the control which stimulates sex gland activity into all of its effects upon health.

After being started, the hormones secreted by these sex glands put brakes on the activity of their pituitary control, so that between the two glands there is a cycle which acts as a health balance wheel.

When foreign glands are substituted they produce the health-giving effects, but by shutting off the pituitary control, hinder that gland in its natural function of keeping the sex glands healthy.

Indians have lived continuously in the southwest region of the United States ever since 1,500 years before Christ, it was reported by Dr. Frank H. R. Roberts, Jr., of the Smithsonian Institution of Washington.

For the first 1,500 years they led a roving life, and lived by hunting game and collecting wild grains and seeds.

About the time of Christ, however, these Indians lost their wandering habits and learned how to raise corn. With a fairly dependable food supply thus assured, they began settling in permanent villages.

Women Ride to Death.

FLORENCE, S. C., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Two women, busily engaged in conversation, rode to their deaths today when an Atlantic Coast Line train struck their automobile at a crossing near here. Witnesses said Mrs. F. A. Kendall, Florence social leader, and Miss Margaret Sessions, graduate nurse of Conway, were chatting and apparently did not see a train as they drove on the crossing. Both were killed instantly.

RAIL PLAN'S FATE RESTS WITH I. C. C.

Commission To Decide Matter Without Any Aid From Outside.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Interest in the gigantic consolidation plan of the eastern railroads swerved today to the interstate commerce commission which has the final word on the proposal to group the billion-dollar lines into four independent systems.

While a storm is brewing in the senate over the proposition and an inquiry by the senate interstate commerce committee seems likely, it was emphasized today the fate of the consolidation rests wholly with the independent commission.

The railroad executives who worked out the merger plan with the encouragement of President Hoover will meet tomorrow in New York to ratify their agreement. It is expected the plan will be submitted soon to the commission. There is no inkling of its attitude.

"It is wholly up to the interstate commerce commission," asserted Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, a member of the senate interstate commerce committee.

However, Chairman Couzens, of this committee, who yesterday severely criticized the president for his part in the undertaking, is prepared to have his group look into the proposition.

It is the understanding of Senator Couzens and other committee members who believe the inquiry should be made that the committee has authority to go ahead with an investigation under a resolution adopted last session ordering a study of consolidation proposals.

Senator Couzens has charged that the consolidation was "forced" and that it is "more the result of high finance than it is in public interest."

However, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, one of the four units in the consolidation, today disputed reports that he had favored the proposal in deference to President Hoover. He said he had favored the four-party plan from the start.

Reports that President Hoover would arbitrate the remaining difference among the railroads over the consolidation plan were understood at the White House tonight to be erroneous.

KIDNAPED HEIR TO BUSCH WEALTH FREED BY CAPTORS

and his face was dirty. His new long-trousers suit, which he put on for the first time last night, was wrinkled. He was put to bed at his grandfather's home. He was not permitted to talk to anyone by the members of the family.

The attorney said the boy corroborated the story of the kidnaping told by Thomas Leroy Yowell, 38-year-old family chauffeur. Troll said his theory was that the kidnaping had not been plotted but was decided upon suddenly after Yowell had been held up and robbed.

Yowell said the boy was taken from him by a negro who forced him at the point of a revolver to stop a sedan in which he was leaving the grounds of the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Orthwein, in exclusive Huntleigh village, St. Louis county. He was taking the boy to Grant's farm to have a New Year's dinner with his grandfather.

Yowell said he gave the negro the few dollars he had in his pocket. When told by the robber to "get out" he told the boy to come along. Yowell said, but the robber said to "leave him here," then slammed the doors and drove away.

In the presence of his father, Attorney Troll and his five-year-old brother, Jimmy, Adolphus tonight was allowed to talk with reporters. The boy calmly answered all questions except those ruled out by Troll.

The boy said the kidnaper asked him whether he was "Percy Orthwein's son," an' he replied in the affirmative.

The remark was interpreted by reporters as indicating the kidnaping was for ransom, but when they tried to question him further along that line Troll said:

"Now that is enough about that. Just continue your story."

After describing the abduction, reporters asked Adolphus to tell about the house where he was taken by the kidnaper, but Troll interrupted and refused to let him continue.

"The man wasn't rough toward me, and I wasn't frightened," the boy continued. "I asked him what kind of a revolver he had, and he said 'A .38.'"

The boy said he was given scrambled eggs for breakfast this morning, but "they were very dirty and I didn't eat much." Most of the time in the house, Adolphus said, he was kept under a blanket. The abductor wore a hood that covered his head and shoulders, the boy said. After relating how he had heard dogs barking during the night, the boy started to tell how his captor took him to the road where he was released, but Troll spoke up and prevented him from telling about that.

As Adolphus finished his story, his father turned to Jimmy and asked: "Jimmy, what would you do if they tried to kidnap your brother again?"

"I'd curse them," Jimmy said.

Troll said Detective Lieutenant Ira Cooper, negro, who was given credit for the rescue of a kidnaped bookmaker last summer and the arrest of his abductors also "assisted materially" in obtaining the release of the Orthwein boy.

ATLANTA-MIAMI LINK IS OPENED

With the departure of two bi-motored planes carrying seven passengers, mostly officials of Eastern Air Transport, Inc., from Candler field at 9:15 Thursday morning and the arrival there at 7:35 Thursday night of the first plane from Miami, direct passenger service between New York, Atlanta and Florida was inaugurated with the opening of the Atlanta-Miami leg of the route.

The huge Kingbird ship from Miami, piloted by Frank J. Jordone, carried three passengers and approximately 150 pounds of mail. Five passengers were aboard when it left Miami but one was discharged at Jacksonville and one at Macon.

In the first of the two planes to leave for Miami Thursday morning were Thomas B. Doe, president of the corporation operating the air mail and passenger system; Thomas B. Doe, Jr., H. A. Elliott, vice president and general manager, and Doug Davis, veteran Atlanta pilot.

Luncheon in Jacksonville.

The second plane carried Postmaster E. K. Large, Atlanta; John K. Ottley, Jr., district operations manager of Eastern Air Transport; Mrs. John K. Ottley, Jr., Dr. Sam Silverman, Atlanta, and William A. Sevier, pilot.

Stops were made at Macon, Jacksonville, Daytona Beach, Palm Beach and Miami.

The south-bound schedule to Miami from here is 6 hours and 30 minutes, with a 25-minute stop at Jacksonville for lunch. On the north-bound planes the schedule is 6 hours and 10 minutes with no stop for lunch.

There were no ceremonies here marking the opening of the new leg, although it was the last link in regular air mail and passenger service between New York and South America.

Eastern Air Transport operates the line from New York to Miami, connecting there with Pan-American Airways for Cuba, Porto Rico and South American points.

Spur to St. Petersburg.

The two Kingfords leaving Thursday morning observed the schedule for the daily service to Florida. They left here at 9:15 a. m., C. S. T., arriving at Jacksonville at 1 p. m., E. S. T., where lunch was served, and one reached Miami at 4:45 o'clock, E. S. T. The other was forced to spend the night at Daytona Beach when a landing wheel was broken.

North-bound the planes leave Miami for Atlanta at 11:30 a. m., E. S. T., reaching Jacksonville at 2:50 p. m. and Atlanta at 4:30 p. m., C. S. T.

South-bound the planes arrive at Daytona Beach at 2:15 p. m., E. S. T., making connection there with the Orlando, Tampa, St. Petersburg ships, reaching St. Petersburg at 4:05 p. m., E. S. T.

A plane will leave St. Petersburg daily at 12:10 p. m., E. S. T., arriving at Daytona Beach at 1:45 p. m., E. S. T.

TWO OF FIVE PLANES MEET MINOR MISHAPS

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 1.—(AP)—The last link in a chain of aerial passenger services connecting the three Americas was completed today with inauguration of air mail and passenger facilities between Atlanta and Miami by planes of Eastern Air Transport, Inc.

The service was run on schedule despite two minor mishaps as five planes of the company roared their way toward celebrations of the event in various Florida cities.

A connecting line from St. Petersburg to Daytona Beach via Tampa and Orlando also was inaugurated today.

One of the two northbound planes that left here at 11:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) was forced to discontinue the flight at West Palm Beach because of a leaky fuel tank. The other plane continued its progress with stops at West Palm Beach, Daytona Beach, Jacksonville and Macon. The disabled plane returned to Miami tonight, arriving at 4:45 p. m. (E. S. T.) with the southbound plane that completed its scheduled flight.

At Daytona Beach, the second southbound plane was held up for the night when the tail landing wheel was broken as the vehicle was taxied to the refueling pit.

Passengers of each of the disabled planes were transferred to other planes for continued flights to their destination.

A banquet here tonight ended the celebration of the forging of the last link in the Tri-American service. Officials of the Eastern Air Transport, headed by President T. B. Doe, were hosts to various civic officials of Atlanta, Miami and Jacksonville, who made the southbound voyage.

The southbound planes left Atlanta at 9:15 a. m. (eastern standard time), arriving at Jacksonville at 12:58 p. m. (eastern standard time) and departing after a 45-minute stop for a luncheon and celebration.

Northbound planes from Miami carried G. Carl Adams, mayor of Miami Springs; James E. Yonge, chairman of the municipal aviation board, and B. B. Freeland, member; Sam Valliere, assistant postmaster at Miami; Ralph S. Westing, general traffic manager of the air line, and T. P. Caldwell, division traffic manager.

The planes of Eastern Air Transport, Inc., now carry mail and passengers from New York to Miami by way of Atlanta.

From this point, Pan-American Airways planes complete the chain of service into the Bahama Islands, the West Indies, Central America and into all but two of the countries of South America.

Regular daily north and southbound service will be maintained. One plane will leave here at 11:30 a. m. (eastern standard time) tomorrow on regular schedule for Atlanta. It will be preceded by a special plane carrying company officials to Atlanta.

The company also operates night air mail service from here to Atlanta and thence to New York.

AMBUSHERS KILL 8 U. S. MARINES

Georgia Boy Badly Wounded in Nicaraguan Skirmish.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Insurgents attacking from ambush killed eight United States marines and wounded two in a skirmish between Ocotal and Apali yesterday morning. The wounded were brought here by airplane today.

Reports to the marine barracks said the attack was led by Miguel Ortez, a lieutenant of Augustino Sandino, the insurgent leader. Eleven of the enemy were killed and at least four wounded.

The marine patrol, under Sergeant Arthur M. Palrang, was at work on a telephone line recently put out of service when the attack came. They put up a valiant fight, taking advantage of such cover as offered itself, for two hours until the whole detachment was either killed or wounded.

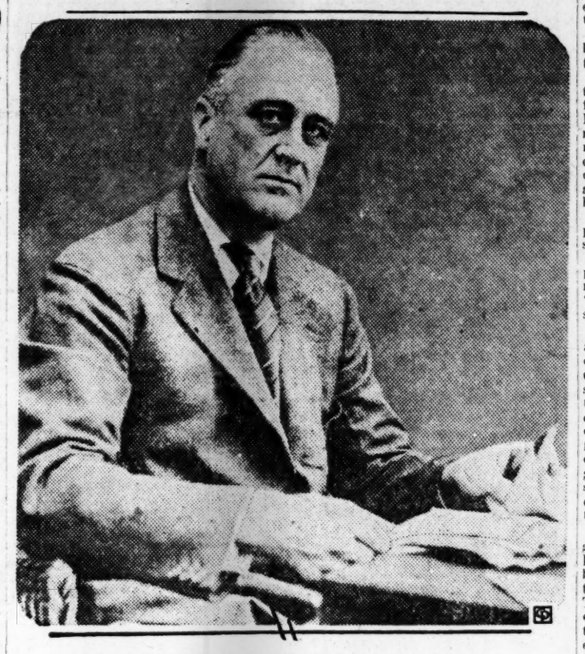
The marine headquarters gave out the following list of casualties:

The dead: Sergeant Palrang, Port Lyons, Colo.; Private Irving P. Aron, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Private Lambert Bush, Bay Minette, Ala.; Private Edward Elliott, Des Moines, Iowa; Private Joseph Albert Harbaugh, Washington, Pa.; Private Frank Kosiendski, Buffalo, N. Y.; Private Richard J. Litz, Indianapolis, Ind., and Private Joseph Arthur McCarty, Chillicothe, Mo.

The wounded: Frank Austin Jackson, Lawrenceville, Ga.; Mack Hutcherson, 2408 Queens Heights, Shreveport, La.

This was the first serious clash since last November when insurgents attacked a Nicaraguan national guard outpost at Matignas, killing five of the garrison and putting five others to flight after they had made a brave defense. American marine airplanes reconnoitered in the area the next day, but the attackers were not discovered.

Roosevelt Again Inaugurated As Governor of Empire State



GOVERNOR FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Franklin Delano Roosevelt was inaugurated as governor of New York for a second term today amid brief and simple ceremonies.

In his inaugural address the executive warned against the dangers of centralization of government, and urged a reform in local government, which he characterized as "archaic in design."

This inaugural spectacle was stripped of virtually all the military pageantry that has marked former ceremonials of a like nature.

But color was not wanting. It was supplied by the bright uniforms of an honorary escort, by the gold lace of the governor's military staff, by the brilliant academic hoods of the state regents and by the vestments of the Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal bishops of Albany.

When former Governor Alfred E. Smith and Mrs. Smith entered the assembly chamber, the crowd gave them an ovation. Other celebrities were applauded.

When Governor Roosevelt, leaning upon the arm of his secretary, Guernsey T. Cross, stepped upon the platform through a door leading from the office of the speaker of the assembly, there was a prolonged applause.

With quiet restored in the chamber Bishop Gibbons asked the invocation.

This was followed immediately by the administration of the oath of office to the governor by Edward J. Flynn, secretary of state, who was master of ceremonies. As the governor signed the oath, the first blast of a salute of 19 guns outside the capitol proclaimed to the city that another state executive had formally been inducted into office.

All of the governor's family were present at the exercises. Prominent state democrats were present.

A warning against concentration of power in government and a plea for reform in local government now "archaic in design," predominated the second inaugural address.

The governor's comment on a too absolute concentration of power came with an illustration of an incident which he declared was representative of "the dangerous tendency to forget a fundamental of American democracy which rests on the right of a locality to manage its local affairs—the tendency to encourage concentration of power at the top of a governmental structure alien to our system and more closely akin to a dictatorship or the central committee on a communistic regime."

A letter from an editor which the governor said "tearfully" informed him that all local government had broken down prompted the governor to discuss the matter in his address. The editor begged the governor, the executive said, to "usurp and assume the functions of the officials duly elected by the communities," and said the alternative would be establishment of martial law.

The governor asked his audience to note in this plea "the unconscious willingness to accept a czar or an absolute dictator in the governor's chair at Albany."

"Now, my friend was right about one thing," the governor said. "Local government as a whole is open to severe criticism and this applies to the cities, to the towns, to the counties and to the multiplicity of other local agencies.

"But why," he asked, "are our local governments archaic in design, unsuited for the purpose for which they are established, unsatisfactory in their functioning and profligate in the spending of the taxpayers' contributions? The answer is not hard to find. It is because the individual citizen is indifferent to his local problems."

The governor declared it would be appalling to compute the millions of dollars which taxpayers have paid for the price of their indifference.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID FRANCIS E. WILLIAMS

Banker and Civic Leader Laid To Rest in Macon Cemetery.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 1.—(AP)—In final tribute to Francis E. Williams, banker and civic leader, men and women filled Christ church, stood in the aisles and gallery, and waited before the doors Thursday while Dr. Cyril E. Bentley read the simple funeral service of the Episcopalians.

Flowers in deep red and pure white stood out against the brown walls of the church and the tall pipes of the organ. Many valley lilies and a heavy spray of roses from employes of the Luther Williams Bank and Trust Company lay on the silvered casket.

In their somber vestments, the choirs of Christ church and St. Paul's filed into the church. Rev. Cyril E. Bentley began the services. He read from eighth Romans:

"I reckon that the suffering of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed to us, for the earnest expectation of the Creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God."

The choirs sang a processional from the church hymnal and the rector offered a short prayer. After another hymn was sung, the body of Francis Williams was carried from the church whose servant he had been for many years, and was taken to Rose Hill cemetery.

The pallbearers were: A. O. B. Sparks, C. Y. Alexander, Leo Sheridan, Sam L. Orr, Dr. Ben Bashinski, George McCommon, Joe P. Greenleaf, and Charles Sparks.

Mr. Williams died after an illness which ended in double bronchial pneumonia.

The Atlantic Coast Line railroad is now the owner of the property as successor to the Brunswick & Western railroad. The parties bringing the suit claim that the property has been abandoned for railroad purposes and is now being used for filling stations and purposes that do not constitute a strict compliance with the provisions of the gift deed.

The property in question is located between the Wilson block and the Lott block, fronting on Plant avenue, and is a valuable business site.

Ware County 4-H Club Youth Wins State Live Stock Award

Pictured here is Edwin Wilkinson, Ware county 4-H club member, with one of his pigs which helped him to become state champion in the national meat animal live stock project contest.

BY TURNER M. HIERS.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 1.—Edwin Wilkinson, of Ware county, has been announced as state winner in the national meat animal live stock project contest, by G. V. Cunningham, state boys' club agent.

The contest is sponsored annually by the national 4-H club organization, with headquarters in Chicago. Prizes for the winners in the county, state, sectional and national parts of the contests were given by Thomas E. Wilson, of the Wilson Packing Corporation.

Young Wilkinson has been awarded a 19-jewel gold watch, worth $50, as his prize for winning the state championship. The following 4-H club boys who won in county projects and have been awarded gold-filled medals of honor are:

County Champions.

George T. Kling, Chattooga county; Rupert Willis, Talbot county; Jim Durden, Montgomery county; Willie McGee, Bibb county; Tryon Reynolds, Jenkins county; Harold V. Wright, Greene county; Cecil Parks, Taylor county; Charles Thomas, Franklin county; Clayton Grace, Twiggs county, and Bernard Skinner, Carroll county. These prizes have already been mailed by Mr. Cunningham, the state agent.

The story of Edwin Wilkinson's 4-H club project as told by himself in a letter to the state club agent, is as follows:

"In 1926 I joined the 4-H club for the first time and started with six black Poland China pigs.

"I sent three barrows and one gilt to the Savannah, Macon and Southeastern fairs, where I won $40 in prize money and sold the barrows for $105.19.

"I had two gilts left; they farrowed seven and nine pigs, respectively; 13 pigs were raised from the bunch. I kept three of the boar pigs for barrows for the 1927 fairs and sold the others for $163, giving me a total from sales to that date of $268.19, not including my prize money of $40.

"In 1927 I became a leader boy of the Boggy Bay Club, with only two boys as members. At the end of the year I had four members, one of them sent two gilts to the Southeastern fair in Atlanta, winning first and second prizes. The other boys had one sow pig back for the 1928 fairs. I also had one sow and one boar for the 1928 fairs and after showing them at the Southeastern, Macon and Savannah fairs, and winning several premiums, I sold the boar for $50.

Enlarged Club.

"In 1928 after having become thoroughly sold on the value of club work and having been so much benefited by it, I went out to get other members for the club. I secured six additional members, after telling them of how my club work had benefited me. I assisted my father and mother in meeting some of their obligations as well as having money of my own.

"At the end of 1928 I had 11 boys in the club, of which three were members of the poultry club and the others in the pig club.

"My first visit to the Southeastern fair was made in 1928, this being my first visit to a large fair. I cannot express the pleasure and benefit I got from this trip. It gave me an opportunity to meet and discuss pig club work with the county agents in the club ring. I had lots to tell the boys when I returned home.

"Last year I won a scholarship to Camp Wilkins. I have enjoyed these trips immensely and have been benefited by them. I have learned a great many new things about live stock and farming in general.

Kiwanis and Newspaper Co-operate.

"The membership of the Boggy Bay Club now is 22, through the splendid work of our county agent, B. J. Heyde, co-operating with us. Most of the boys belong to both the pig club and the corn club. We weigh our pigs regularly on the first of each month. The Waycross papers publish our stories to show to the city people what we are doing. The Kiwanis Club has given assistance in buying pigs for the boys who joined the barrow club, buying the pigs and taking the boys' notes to be paid when the barrows were sold. This has encouraged many boys and helped them to become members.

"If every boy in the rural communities would catch the spirit of co-operation that is taught in club work within five or ten years Georgia would be one of the greatest live stock and agricultural states in the south.

"Here's hoping that every farm boy in Georgia will become a 4-H club member and do his best to live up to its principles."

First Born of New Year Announced in Savannah

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Martha Therese, eight-and-a-quarter-pound girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Kavanaugh, was Savannah's first born of the new year.

The newcomer was born at St. Joseph's hospital at 11:20 o'clock Thursday morning and her registration at city hall was made at 11:30. This is considerably behind past records for celerity. Last year a boy, Joseph White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse James White, was born at three minutes after midnight. The year prior it was seven hours after midnight.

Twelve Store Windows Shattered by New Year Celebrants.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Plate glass windows in 12 Savannah business establishments were shattered as New Year celebrants milled about the business district.

Police arrested 14 marines, believed responsible for the smashing welcome to 1931. All of the marines, however, later were released.

John E. Foy, police commissioner, said he would confer with Mayor Saussy to determine if the arrest of the marines should be reported to General Harry Lee, commander of the United States marine base at Parris Island.

After first reports of window smashing reached police headquarters the patrol wagon was kept active until 3 a. m.

Windows reported broken included those of B. H. Levy Brother & Company; Lerner's Store; Caroline Hat Shop; Ludden & Bates Music Store, Viking Plumbing Shop, King Real Estate Office, Adler's Department Store and others.

Three Putnam Couples Are Wed Same Day

EATONTON, Ga., Jan. 1.—Parents of three Putnam county couples received their biggest Christmas surprises late this year when they were notified by Dan Cupid that their sons and daughters had eloped and married Christmas Day.

Miss Dorothy Montgomery, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Montgomery, was wedded to Clifford Marshall, son of Warren Marshall, county school superintendent, and at the same time Ruth Montgomery, second eldest daughter of L. C. Montgomery and a sister of Dorothy, was married to Asa Marshall, Jr., both couples motoring over to South Carolina to have the marriage ceremonies performed. They returned later and announced to their parents what had taken place.

On the same day of the Montgomery and Marshall weddings Miss Mildred Bailey, of Buckhead, and Philip Wallace, of the Harmony community, were married.

Wedding Starts in 1930 And Ends New Year's

MACON, Ga., Jan. 1.—(AP)—When W. D. Bennett, manager of Miller field here for Eastern Air Transport, Inc., returned today with a bride, he wasn't certain whether he was married in 1930 or 1931.

It happened at midnight last night at Hapeville, Ga.

The ceremony began in 1930 and ended in 1931, it was revealed.

The Rev. Z. E. Barron, former Macon pastor, tied the knot.

The bride's home was formerly in Hartsville, S. C., but she had been living for some time in Hapeville.

Wednesday night Bennett drove to Hapeville to watch the old year out and the new year in with Miss Tyner. But the pastor and a number of other friends were called in to witness the event.

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A fighting bunch of lads from Boys' High school, Atlanta, Ga., coached by "Shorty" Doyal, former Georgia Tech tackle, whipped coach George Bronson's Houston High All-Stars, 7 to 0, today.

Chick Donehoo, Boys' High quarterback, started a drive in the fourth period that resulted in the only score. Perkerson, a substitute back, carried the ball over for a touchdown for the Purples.

Luke Mizell, hard-running and expert blocking back, led the Georgians to victory.

The Houston team had more power than the visitors, but at no time came close to scoring a touchdown against the lighter but harder fighting Georgians.

Jeff Roberts' poor strategy should have cost Houston a touchdown in the third period when the score was 0 to 0.

Mizel dashed through the line for 18 yards, taking the ball to Houston's 37-yard line. After the All-Stars held, Brumback kicked out of bounds on the Houston five-yard line.

On the first down, Roberts passed from behind his own goal. Mizell intercepted on the Houston 13-yard line.

MIZELL FAILS.

Mizell made a yard over left guard. Mizell failed to gain in a try at the line. Mizell passed to Smith for a 5-yard gain. On the next play, Mizell, on a line plunge, failed by a fraction of an inch to make it first down on Houston's 3-yard line.

The officials held a long consultation, and finally decided the distance had not been made.

Soon after the game began Houston opened up with an assortment of plays but found a stubborn Purple wall that would not give and the locals resorted to punting. Boys' High likewise could not gain consistently and neither team had any chance to score in the first period.

In the second period both teams continued to smash the lines with no consistent gains. Late in the quarter Mizell, of Boys' High, intercepted a Houston pass and ran 18 yards before being forced out of bounds. Boys' High was held and Brumbaugh punted out of bounds on Houston's 1-yard line. An exchange of punts and several passes failed to gain ground and the ball was in midfield as the half ended.

After battling back and forth near the middle of the field during the major part of the third quarter Boys' High punted out of bounds on the Houston 6-yard line. Mizell intercepted a Houston pass on the 6-yard line and the Hurricane was held for downs as the quarter ended with no scoring.

Coach Doyal handled his team in masterful fashion, jockeying his players so the All-Stars never had a chance to batter down the Georgians.

KATZ STARS.

Captain "Kitty" Katz, end, played a great game for the victors, time after time diving under the interference to toss the ball carrier for a loss.

Other Atlanta forwards who showed to advantage were Preston, Jones, Brewer, Glenn, Fitzsimmons, House, Van Sant, Braunstein, Nash, Rhodes, Gatchel and Nevitt.

Mizell, Donehoo, Brumbach, Smith, McKinstry, Perkerson, Sheldon and Beard all looked good in the backfield.

NO GREAT WORK.

There was little in the play of the Houston team to excite any football fan, except the great potentialities of the husky players.

Here's an example: "Bobo" McKnight, 190-pound Houston back, is one of the greatest pass snatchers in the state. But not a single forward pass was tossed his way during the game.

Warren Barrett, of Houston, turned in two sensational catches of passes from Roberts.

THE UNDISCOVERED.
(Maxims of 1931.)

Man has found out many things,
A most prolific crop;
But no one yet has ever found
A soft road to the top.

Man has spun out many dreams
Where all the arts may lurk;
But no one yet has ever found
A substitute for work.

FADING LEGS.

KEENE FITZPATRICK, Princeton's noted trainer, recently sounded a true note, joining with Justin Huntley McCarthy in the query, "where are the legs of yesterday?"

It is Keene's idea that the human leg, through lack of use, is losing its old strength and power. The world probably has no more important contribution to the welfare of the race than the automobile. It has even been largely responsible for the wide development of sport. But it was not invented to carry youth everywhere that youth has to go, from 200 yards to a mile. There has undoubtedly been a big falling off in walking and running, in the general use of legs. This is one reason there are so many leg injuries during a football season and why so few distance runners are developed in the various universities.

"I have seen this change coming for some time," Keene Fitzpatrick said a short while ago. "It has been marked in college sports. Modern youth isn't walking and running enough, isn't making enough use of leg power to get around. This increased leg exercise is a vital need in the physical development of today's boys and girls, today's young men and young women."

Paavo Nurmi had to walk or run 10 or 12 miles each day to school and back home, a total or 20 or more miles. This was the exercise that through two Olympics gave him more distance championships from 1,500 to 10,000 meters than any runner has ever known. He had built up the right leg strength in his younger days.

Keene Fitzpatrick is right. Take baseball. In the old days such players as Ty Cobb, Hans Wagner, Larry Jajoie, Pop Anson and others lasted from 21 to 23 years in the big leagues, and they were all big men. There are not so many 20-year players around now. Their legs have given out. Gene Tunney spent many years building up his legs. And it was this leg strength that helped him to get off the floor in the last Dempsey fight and dance out of range until he had recovered his bearings. This was no gift from nature to Tunney. It was the result of seven or eight years of hard work on the road, walking and running.

TILDEN'S RETIREMENT.

IT is quite possible that Bill Tilden might have come back for one more year to make a bold bid for the tennis championship of the United States. But it would have been a harder row than last year, with so many young stars in the road. They have gained a year's experience and Tilden has lost another year of youth.

At any rate, the tall Philadelphian has piled up one of the greatest tennis records of all time. Probably no other tennis player ever held as high an average of play for 12 years.

It will be interesting to see whether another can take as definite leadership of the courts in the next few seasons.

WINNING CAPTAINS.

THE point has been brought up as to how many football captains could handle their teams on the field without any coaching aid. Nineteen hundred and thirty had more than a few of this type. In the list there were Ticknor, of Harvard; Conley, of Notre Dame; Simrall, of Michigan; Fesler, of Ohio State; Thayer, of Tennessee—and this is only a small percentage of the whole.

Simrall, of Michigan, had his full share to do with the Wolverines' fine record. He may not have gotten quite as much publicity as the others named, but in addition to being a high-class back he was also a natural leader who had the full confidence of his men.

If any football squad elects a captain who isn't fitted for the job of leadership, the squad will pay the penalty next fall. But it might surprise more than a few to know how many of these football captains are equipped to handle a team on the field and handle it ably.

DOUBLING UP.

IT MAY come to pass that civilization will meet its hardest test in 1931—the support of two heavyweight champions. Whether or not modern civilization will be equal to any such undertaking, what with all its other troubles, is a guess. With Sharkey representing one camp and Schmeling, or Stribling the other, the turmoil ought to break all records, even if it doesn't mean anything or lead anywhere.

Tide's Game on Coast Salves Dixie's Wounds

Vandy, Georgia, Kentucky and Florida Proud To Have Bowed to South's Greatest Club.

By Ralph McGill.

What a ball club this Alabama outfit turned out to be!

What is the name of that football team at South Bend, Indiana?

And don't the gridiron wounds feel better, oh, very much better indeed, up at Vanderbilt, over at Georgia and out there at Kentucky and down yonder at Florida?

For a dime the Commodores will let you see the scar where Alabama kicked them in the heel of their uniforms. If you are close to the Bulldogs they will let you see the toe that they stubbed trying to pass Alabama on the way to the championship. And now you know what makes the Wildcats wild and the 'Gators weep salty tears and no crocodile tears at all.

It was an honor to get kicked by a team such as Wallace Wade turned out this past season and carried on into the glad new year. Wounds inflicted by the Red Regiment from Tuscaloosa don't ache as much today.

There were two million flowers paraded in the Tournament of Roses parade at Pasadena before the game.

All of them will not assuage the grief that is Washington State's today.

They should have let the Cougar out of his cage in the second half and let him play in the Washington State line. The odds would then have been about 10 to 1 on Alabama instead of 10 to 6.

DIXIE GLOWS.

At any rate southern football glows with such a brilliant light today that much of Notre Dame's glory is dimmed.

There is no manner or method to determine which team could have won, Alabama or Notre Dame. Yet the issue would have been gravely in doubt. Wallace Wade had almost as many reserves as did old Ka-Nute Rockne at South Bend.

Wallace Wade saved his masterpiece for the last show of his career with the Tuscaloosa eleven.

LOOKS BEST.

This Alabama football team is probably the greatest football team the

FURMAN PLAYS A. C. SATURDAY

Atlanta Athletic Club's basketball team will open its 20th season at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night on the Athletic Club court as a climax to the week's activities of three games. Furman's Purple Hurricane will be opponents of Coach Joe Bean's Red and White team.

A long light workout was held Friday night with the regulars lined up against a "Red" team. There was no hard scrimmaging but Coach Bean perfected several new plays and gave the veterans a general conditioning.

After more than two months of practicing the A. A. C. team is about set with a veteran lineup. They have worked slowly and easily and appear to be ready for a long hard grind.

Coach Bean will likely start Saturday's game with Pat Stephens and Dee Brewer at forwards; Captain Cy Bell at center, and Pinkey Bynum and Joe McCrory at guards. Reserves who are likely to see service in the game include Virlyn Moore, Jr., Frank Player and several other youngsters.

HACKMAN STARS AS SOUTHWEST TEAM WINS, 18-0

Tennessee Star Plays Brilliant Game Before 14,000 at Dallas.

By Gayle Talbot, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Striking twice through the air in the first half and again in the ebbing minutes of play on a 40-yard run by Buddy Hackman, brilliant University of Tennessee halfback, the Southwest All-Stars defeated the Middle West, 18 to 0, in the third annual Dixie classic here today.

An estimated crowd of 14,000 saw a great exhibition of football and helped swell a fund to go to the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children here. To add to the pleasure of the occasion, it was the first time the home fans had seen their standard bearers victorious over huskies from the north country.

There was never a doubt of the superiority of the team coached by Morley Jennings, of Baylor. It outclassed the crew of Coach Bob Zuppke in every department of play, dealing the invaders equal misery through the air and on the ground. The closest the Midwest came to scoring was in the third period, when a recovered fumble and a short pass gave the invaders a first down on their opponents' 17 yard line. An intercepted pass cost them an opportunity to score from there.

Led by Hackman, whose accurate passing and brilliant ball carrying easily featured the contest, the Southwest piled up 12 first downs to 5 for the visitors. The Southwest attempted 10 passes and completed 5 for a total gain of 99 yards. Two of them supplied perfect set-ups for touchdowns. The Midwest tossed only five and completed two for 20 yards. Two were intercepted.

ATTACK SPIKED.

The running attack that Zuppke had relied on to beat down the Southwest defenses, was spiked from the very first by the big, aggressive line of the winners. Only Jensvold, a human dyhamo from Iowa University, was able to break through for gains, and he either plunged or passed all of his team's first downs.

Jensvold and Vanyo, a big guard from Ypsilanti Normal, easily were the outstanding performers for the Midwest.

The dashing figure of Hackman stood out above his mates of the Southwest, but he shared starring honors with a half-dozen others who played almost equally as well. Dynamic little Jake Wilson, Baylor quarterback, consistently outpunted every man sent against him and turned in several pretty runs.

DALRYMPLE STARS.

Dalrymple, a long-legged end from Henderson College, turned in probably the most sensational defensive game for the victors, closely pushed by Bochey Koch, squat guard from Baylor.

Hackman plunged across for the Southwest's initial touchdown midway of the first period, after a pass from Wilson to Louie Long, Southern Methodist end, had carried the ball 48 yards to the 1-foot line.

Bethea took the second one over on a pretty sweep around end after a toss from Andy Brown, of Centenary to Peterson, rangy Texas wing, had planted the oval on the 3-yard stripe.

Hackman, failing to spot an eligible pass receiver in the fourth period, reversed his field, and, with the assistance of some splendid blocking, weaved through a swarm of tacklers for the third score.

First Quarter.

Neither the Midwest nor Southwest was able to make any sustained gains after the kickoff and there followed a punting duel, with Jake Wilson's quick kicks pushing the invaders back into their own territory.

Finally Chattin, midwest safety, fumbled a punt from Wilson and Peterson recovered for the Southwest on the visitors' 37-yard line.

On first play from there, Hackman was thrown for a long loss on an attempted pass. On second try Wilson shot a pass to Long, who fought his way 40 yards to the 1-foot line before he was brought down. Hackman plunged across for the game's first touchdown, but attempt at extra point was blocked.

Wilson's great kicking continued to keep the Midwest in hot water. After an exchange he planted one out on the visitors' 6-yard line and Molloy's return punt was downed on his own 22-yard stripe. Up to this point the Midwest backs had lost more ground than they had gained with their running attack. After two running plays by the Southwest had failed to gain, the first period ended with the ball deep in Midwest territory.

Second Quarter.

Coach Zuppke sent in seven new men to start the second period for the Midwest, including a new backfield.

It took the Southwest only three plays to score again when play was resumed. After one long pass failed, a triple pass from Brown to Hackman to Peterson carried 17 yards to the Midwest 3-yard line and Bethea carried it over after taking a lateral from Brown. Dale missed the extra point and Southwest led, 12 to 0.

Coach Jennings sent in five new men.

The Midwest backs continued to plug away at the Southwest line but couldn't gain a foot through Koch, Lee, Parradeaux and the other Southwest stalwarts. The home boys could do little and the result was an extended punting duel.

Jensvold gave the invaders their initial first down when he turned an end for 11 yards to midfield. In four plunges the Midwest ripped another

Smith and Young Lead Bulldogs To Decisive Victory.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 1.—Rampaging Bulldog basketeers from the University of Georgia tonight handed the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. five a sound thrashing at 60 to 33 on the Georgia court.

The Bulldogs, playing a fast game at the start, sped into the lead early and never let up, although their pace slowed as it became evident that they would not be hard-pressed. They left the court at half-time with a 23-9 advantage.

"Catfish" Smith and Leroy Young tied for scoring honors with 15 points each. They were pressed by Fincher, of the visitors, who tallied 14 markers, and by Strickland, with 13, and Sanford, with 10, of their mates. Brock trailed Fincher for the Y with nine.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 1.—University of Georgia's Bulldog quintet after a few practice skirmishes will wade into a schedule of 17 conference and one non-conference opponent, Saturday night in Woodruff Hall in the opening of the regular playing season. South Carolina will be opponents for the Bulldogs in the first conference game.

Coach Herman J. Stegeman has been working daily with the team which appears to be in good condition. They have played two practice games during the past few days and are ready to take their place against conference opponents.

A combination of "Catfish" Smith, Harold Hill, Sandy Sanford, Bill Strickland and Tommy Reeder looked unusually good in recent scrimmages.

PETROLLE WINS.

FARGO, N. D., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, won a decision over Billy Light, St. Paul welterweight, in a feature six-round bout here today. Petrolle, a lightweight, was unable to reach Light effectively and long range fighting and clinches resulted in which Petrolle had the better of the milling.

Tuscaloosa Wild As Alabama Wins

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 1. (AP)—As telegraph wires and radio brought the news late today of the 24-to-0 victory of Alabama's Crimson Tide over the Cougars of Washington State in the annual Rose Bowl battle at Pasadena, this college town rang with enthusiastic cheers for Coach Wallace Wade and the fighting Alabama eleven which brought to the south its third Rose Bowl victory in the last five years.

Impromptu celebrations were staged in all parts of the city with students joining with staid townspeople in praising this year's edition of the Crimson Tide.

The celebrations continued well into the night and preliminary plans were launched for a gigantic welcome to the team when it arrives early next week.

Tidesmen Praise Edwards, Schwartz

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1.—Alabama players joined tonight in praising the sportsmanship and play of the Washington State eleven, defeated by Alabama, 24 to 0, in the Rose Bowl today.

"Foots" Clements and Freddie Sington, Alabama's two tackles, declared Edwards to be the best tackle they had seen all year and Schwartz the toughest fullback they had tackled. Hill, the pass-catching end of the Cougars, also came in for fancy praise.

The Tide made the breaks early and the Cougars never recovered but they made a great stand despite the score. Their late rally was great.

S. I. A. A. HONORS SHARED BY TWO

Presbyterian, Southwestern Louisiana Own Major Crowns of Year.

Major sports honors for 1930 in America's largest athletic group, the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, go to Presbyterian College of South Carolina and Southwestern Louisiana Institute.

The Blue Stockings of Presbyterian won the association track meet for the second consecutive year in May and finished the recent football campaign with six victories, one more than any other squad.

Southwestern Louisiana Institute brought the loop basketball championship to the Cajan country for the first time by downing Millsaps in the tournament finals.

Erskine of South Carolina led during the regular basketball campaign with 10 victories and no defeats, but the Seceders were upset in the first round of the tournament. Southwestern Louisiana finished the regular campaign with 12 wins and 3 losses, while Millsaps followed with 12 victories and 4 defeats.

Coach Lonnie McMillan's speedy Presbyterian youngsters had a runaway for the track and field honors, which they previously had won in 1927 and 1929, scoring more points than their nearest competitors, Louisville and Georgetown, Kentucky members, trailed far behind.

Five association teams finished the S. I. A. A. football campaign unbeaten. Presbyterian was out in front with six association victories, while Centre of Kentucky had five wins and Spring Hill of Alabama had four. Centenary and Loyola of Louisiana won the two games on their association schedule.

The S. I. A. A. had 31 competing members during 1930 but recent membership admissions raise their total to 34 for the new year.

New York Team Rallies To Win in Extra Period, 32-26.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Georgia Tech's touring basketball team went down to defeat before Manhattan College in a fast and furious struggle that went into overtime tonight, 32 to 26.

The southerners were in the lead during the major part of the nip and tuck struggle but tired when the game went into an extra period and Manhattan rallied to win.

After Georgia Tech had led during most of the first half, a field goal and foul by Ciccolello enabled Manhattan to pull into a 10-10 tie at half time. The second half was bitterly fought with the score tied at 12-12, 14-14 and 18-18. Then Georgia Tech pulled ahead, 23-18, but the locals rallied and finally a field goal by Kelleher deadlocked the count at 28-23 just as regulation time ended. In the overtime, the southerners gained a 26-25 lead but field goals by Hasset, Koeck and McCormick and a foul by Hasset gave the locals the game.

McCormick led Manhattan's attack with seven field goals. McArthur, Georgia Tech center, tallied four field goals, while Perkins and Gooding each scored three.

Tuskegee Tigers Win Houston Game

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 1.—With "Shorty" Shanklin, 115-pound backfield ace, leading the attack, the Tuskegee Tigers from Alabama sent the Prairie View Normal football team down to defeat by a score of 19 to 7 here today.

Shanklin, who was named on the negro all-American team of 1930, thrilled the crowd with one of the greatest exhibitions of line plunging ever seen on a Houston gridiron. He scored two of his team's three touchdowns.

McCarthy, of Tuskegee, provided another thrill when he sprinted 70 yards for the Tigers' final marker. Dupree played best for the losers, scoring their only touchdown.

trate the solid defense the Tide set up when in danger.

WEATHER SHIFT.

It must have been the weird break in weather that so completely changed the Alabama team from a tramping team of destiny to an avenging band of Uhlans who had every weapon imaginable, and used each mercilessly.

The first touchdown came from a play in which Moore was moved into the backfield and Suther to end without the enemy discovering it.

The second touchdown developed from a similar play in which the Cougars chased Suther and left Smith clear. And when Monk Campbell ran through the middle of their team for 39 yards to his touchdown the Cougars had no idea where the ball was, so cleverly had it been handled.

SOMETHING, INDEED!

When two such oustanding defensive stars as All-American Hein and All-Pacific Schwartz are tricked by leather manipulation, something indeed has been done with the ball.

One can hardly pick an Alabama star. From the second-stringers who bruised and slowed up the Cougars on through the ranks of the senior varsity that finished the slaughter, each man played his best. The Tidesmen burned themselves out in that wild second period attack that stretched cold the Pacific coast hopes on the damp turf.

I would take this boy John Campbell for mine. Behind a driving line he handled the ball like a magician, and whenever he tucked it under his arm and began one of his low, lunging runs he made yards whether his interference stayed ahead of him or not. More than once it was "interference follow me."

AND FREDDIE.

Freddie Sington lived up to his all-American reputation.

One of the best players in the Tide ranks was Edgar Dobbs, a senior who had been no more than a substitute since his sophomore year. Jess Neely worked the boy up to a pitch and he was a riot.

Strangely contrary to the dope, "Hurry" Cain outkicked the mighty Ellingsen. This was due in part to his powerful leg drive and in part to the rushing given Ellingsen by the Alabama line. Furthermore, Alabama covered kicks better. In fact it was Alabama all the way, just enough of an edge to make the big victory possible.

COACH WADE.

And as the sudden twilight fell and a misting rain that had stayed away during the game resumed, the crowd rushed out on the field from the Alabama side and carried away a pale-faced man on its shoulders.

It was Wallace Wade, the coach who had finished his campaign at Alabama in such a blaze of glory. Shoulders of alumni and shoulders of players were bearing the pale-face man away to the dressing room and out of Alabama football forever.

One can imagine his cup was pretty full of good things. What a happy New Year!

UNCONDITIONAL.

And the spokesman of the coast, Mark Kelly, of the Examiner, said as he left the field, "We ran out of alibi's when Notre Dame sunk us. We simply cannot find an excuse Alabama was far too good for our team."

The Alabama team surprised even their closest supporters with the size of the score. The coast experts, of course, were dumbfounded.

And now the followers of the Tide are celebrating as college boys do at the finish of a long, long haul.

They start home tomorrow at 9 o'clock, a happy crowd. The long campaign in Dixieland, that now seems a prelude to this triumph, could not have ended more gorgeously.

And, as Blinky Horn remarked at the finish, "Washington State showed Alabama what devils looked like, and Alabama showed Washington State what hell was."

GARDEN EARNS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Madison Square Garden Corporation and subsidiaries today reported for the November quarter net profit of $11,414, equal to 3 cents a share, against a net loss of $74,468 in the preceding quarter and $50,559, or 15 cents a share, in the November quarter last year.

Ed Danforth's Running Story of Game

ROSE BOWL, PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1.—Following is a running story by Ed Danforth, sports editor of The Constitution, of Alabama's 24-0 victory over Washington State here this afternoon:

Five hundred thousand people poured into Pasadena today to see the parade of the Tournament of Roses, yet only about 70,000 of these slid down to the Arroyo Seco and pushed into Rose Bowl to see the football game.

Of course the parade was free and the game cost $5, yet it does seem more people, having made this tedious, torturous journey into the city, would have dropped in on the gridiron spectacle.

From now on the Rose Bowl people should have their football players wear bouquets of flowers and fancy dress costumes. It seems it takes that to draw a crowd in California. Or just naming each player for a California town might help. All the floats in the parade of roses were so named.

POURING IN.

From daybreak of a cloudy, chilly day until 10 o'clock, crawling streams of motor cars and pedestrians poured into Pasadena from 10 routes.

They banked the streets 20 feet deep on each side or sat in bleachers waiting for the parade. And as the first of a hundred bands and the vanguard of a thousand mounted officers hove in view the sun retired behind the gray clouds and it grew colder.

Tiny tots perched on flowered floats in the scanty attire of a cupid or the New Year shivered and whimpered and looked helplessly for relief that could not come until the parade was over. Several hauled off and wailed loudly, their tears falling on roses.

IT'S PITIFUL.

Beautiful houri stood in rose-covered sea shells clad in one-piece silk bathing suits, goose flesh and blue lips. They wore a Hollywood smile and the desperate look of explorers trapped on an ice floe in the arctic.

It was a great sight—the endless procession of blossom-built floats of fanciful or grotesque design. That is if you get excited over floats. Personally—but who cares for that?

The fact that all newspapers gravely announced that 2,000,000 blossoms were used in decorating the floats struck me. Imagine the job they had counting those rosebuds.

TIDE DRESSES.

While senility and middle-age watched the rose parade and clapped enthusiastically as floats entered by various cities and civic clubs rolled past, the Alabama players were incarcerated on the sixth floor of the Vista having their ankles taped and listening to the final muttered words from coaches.

They had a light lunch in private and I ft at 12:30 o'clock in a motor bus for the bowl. The short trip required half an hour, so great was the press of motor vehicles along the road that leads down into the arroyo.

The Cougars arrived about the same time on the opposite side of the field and disappeared into their dressing room.

OUTLOOK GLOOMY.

As the crowds poured into the bowl the outlook was, to be frank, a bit gloomy. The sun was utterly gone; heavy black clouds made a low ceiling; gray mists obscured the Sierra Madre range that usually lends a picturesque back drop to the storied stage.

The Californians protested loudly that the mist was caused by smudge fires lighted in the orange groves to prevent chilling of the fruit. It could not be fog or low clouds, they said.

However, when it began to sprinkle rain just before 1 o'clock it caught the native sons short. It had not rained since Thanksgiving Day. It almost never rains in Pasadena almost. Most unusual weather.

COATS—AND ONE-EYED.

A fine cold mist peppered freely over the crowd. Some of them brought blankets. Some wore fur coats. Some actually wore raincoats. And old gentleman from Iowa fearlessly raised an umbrella.

"One-Eyed" Connelly, the perennial gate-crasher, paid a personal visit along press row at 1:15 to make sure his name was sent in.

It was at a cost of several cents a word. The ubiquitive old hobo has cost newspapers a fortune in telegraph tolls in the past 20 years.

BACK HOME.

As the hours wore on the mist completely obscured the majestic peaks. It grew colder. One thought of gloves. I am not being hypocritical when I say it was a typical football day back home.

The roses in the green hedge around the base of the grandstand looked positively phoney and perhaps were.

However, the field was deeper green and two great college teams, champions of their respective sections, were engaged, so who are we to complain because overcoats were a necessity and California sunshine A. W. O. L.

ELABORATE CARD.

An elaborate program of drills and stunts was put on before the game. A Pasadena college band performed musical honors for the Cougars while the Elks band acted on behalf of Alabama.

Word came up that Coach Wade planned to start a mixed varsity and second team with Sington and Clement as the only regulars.

Sington was announced to start alongside Clements as offensive right guard. Owing to superior reserves, Coach Wade hoped to wear down the Cougars and have them limping when he inserted his regulars.

The Cougars were to start their full varsity.

OPEN SPACES.

The bowl has been enlarged to hold 85,000 so there was vast open spaces between the 65,000 customers as the teams came out to warm up.

The whole show looked and felt like a frost, what with the natives crushed and embarrassed by the frigid weather until the Elks' band, acting for the Tide, came on the field playing Dixie. Boy that got 'em. It will get 'em in any language.

Some Alabama countryman let out a yell like his daddy did at the first battle of Bull Run. Over the stadium swept a roar compounded of whistling and screeching and hoarse hallooing that struck the first note of wild enthusiasm.

GOES BIG.

Once started, the show went big. The entrance of "Butch" Meeker, the Washington State Cougar in his cage, followed by the Pasadena band, got an ovation.

Quickly from a tunnel the Alabama squad burst, clad in windproofs. They threw them off and swarmed over one end of the field.

The Cougars, clad in those Mardi Gras costumes of red, came next and the coast gave them a wild reception. You can never know how much like Girl Scouts at a Halloween party a football team can look until you see one dressed in red pants, red shoes, red stockings, red shirts and red hats. Oh, boy!

After so long and cold a time the massed bands played the Star Spangled Banner and the field was cleared for the kickoff.

Just before the kickoff Coach Wade changed his plans slightly and benched Sington to allow Godfrey to go in. Washington State won the toss and elected to kick. Alabama elected to defend the south goal, and away they went.

First Quarter.

Holley brought the kick off back to the 30-yard line. The second stringers plunged into the Red wall twice and punted, Holley delivering a 45-yard boot. Tonkin fumbled when rushed by three Alabama linesmen but Lainhart recovered it.

The Cougars started from their own 26-yard line and on the very first play a guy in red underwear—it was Lainhart—lit out around right end on a reverse play and hustled 22 yards.

It was a shock, but the Tide youngsters halted them and forced a punt. Ellingsen kicked 40 yards and Holley brought it back 10. It was a net loss to Alabama of 10 yards on the exchange.

KICK LOSES.

Alabama kicked again on third down after two plunges. It was a short high boot that gave the Cougars a few more yards.

Starting from midfield, Schwartz got around left end for 11 yards and another first down. The Tidesmen smeared two line plays and when Ellingsen threw a pass too hard his receiver dropped it. Then the sharp shooting Ellingsen drove a short punt out of bounds on the 9-yard line and Alabama was in deep with a mountain on their backs.

But they got a break, and a grand break. Holley kicked on second down from behind his goal line. The ball bounced in front of Tonkin, the Cougar safety man, and hit him on the leg. Dobbs was there to recover it for a big gain.

TURN ABOUT.

Lady Luck turned her back on the Tide then, though Holley got away for a 10-yard gain on a spinner, but fumbled when tackled and a Red Cougar recovered. State came rushing back with a first down on two off tackle plays and on the next one Schwartz got five more.

Then Coach Wade decided the second had gone far enough. They were being outcharged badly, so Sington, Miller, Howard and he big backfield guns went in.

On the first play State was penalized 15 yards for holding. Ellingsen kicked, Campbell took it on the run, fumbled, picked it up and returned 15 yards. Edwards and Ahlskog smeared two plunges and Cain banged a 52-yard punt.

This punt greatly relieved the pressure on the Tide.

FORCED TO PUNT.

Washington was forced to punt on third down and Alabama set out from their own 42. Hein nabbed Suther on an off-tackle play for a 2-yard loss.

Then when Moore dropped back to pass he was rushed by the whole devilish mob for 18-yard loss.

Campbell regained the lost ground, using that dreaded spinner as his weapon. He regained it and more, running to the 47-yard line as the period ended. The gain was 26 yards.

Second Quarter.

On the first play of the second period, Cain kicked out of bounds on the 6-yard line, a magnificent effort and the Cougars were under a heavy disadvantage.

They kicked it back and the Red Elephants lined up on their own 40-yard stripe.

Suther, on a reverse, accounted for 2 yards and Alabama was penalized 5 yards for having the backfield in motion. Then Campbell tossed the ball to Moore, who flipped it 42 yards to Suther, and Suther ran the intervening 20 yards for a touchdown without a Cougar coming even close to him.

PLAY CHEERED.

The stands on both sides arose and roared. It was a superb play. Campbell converted, and Alabama led, 7 to 0.

After one exchange of punts after the kickoff, Eberdt, by a great play, dropped back from center and intercepted Ellingsen's pass on Washington State's 37-yard line.

From here Campbell, on a spin play, twisted through right tackle for 6 yards. On the second play, while the Cougars were running after Suther to their left, Moore passed a long one to Ben Smith for 31 yards. Smith caught it by outjumping two tall Red Devils.

OVER AGAIN.

He was pulled down on the 1-yard line. On the first play the powerful Campbell rammed it over and converted to make the score, 14 to 0.

The Red Elephants were simply warmed up and were going through their plays as if in scrimmage against the scrubs.

Washington State received the kickoff but could do nothing but punt. Then Od Monk Campbell took charge. He was snorting like a bull. He flew off on a spin play and emerged from the tangled mass running like a deer. He got 9 yards before he was flagged. Needing 1 yard, Cain flipped a forward pass that was incomplete. It had the Cougars guessing.

AND AGAIN.

Then, when they were looking for anything, old Monk submarined their right tackle on his spin play, seemed to be stopped, then climbed out of the pile of red shirts and sold out.

Monk was loping like a mule colt as he outran the first two tacklers in the Cougar secondary, and as he sped toward the goal line Jimmy Moore crossing over, took out the last of them.

Campbell had traveled 39 yards to glory that time. He again converted the point and made it 21 to 0.

The half soon ended. The Cougars tried pass after pass but the Crimson linesmen were driving through and rushing the passer off his feet. In fact, they rushed him out from under his red hat.

Just before the half ended Cain fired that same long sky rocket pass to Suther, but it was thrown too far, just beyond his fingers. It was just another touchdown if it had been a foot shorter.

Third Quarter.

Coach Wade sent back a mixed team, mostly second-stringers, for the third period, while the Cougars came back with full strength.

On the second exchange of punts Elmer (The Great) Schwartz smashed through the second-stringers for 15 yards in two off-tackle plunges, but the Tuscaloosa youngsters forced a punt.

Hillman Holley substituted for Suther broke off left tackle from punt formation on a fine dash that carried the ball 35 yards down to the State 26-yard line. Here the rampant youngsters were halted, but blow me down if "Ears" Whitworth, the big guard who had played Santa Claus a week ago didn't step up and boot a placement goal from the same 26-yard line. That made the score: Alabama 24; Washington State 0. "Ears" had never before done that in a game.

WHAT A BOOT!

As a matter of fact, adding his distance back of the line of scrimmage and the distance of the goal posts behind the line, the kick traveled fully 46 yards. It hit the cross bar and bounced over. What a boot the boy had!

Alabama received the next kickoff and the infants brought it up fast past their 35-yard line in four plays. Holley finally had to punt and the ball flew 60 yards over the goal line.

Again the Cougars drove along, using Elmer (The Great) as a battering ram and Tonkin on reverse plays, but they could not continue the advance.

Again Holley led a slashing advance with a 26-yard jaunt around right end but he was called back for a holding infraction. The quarter ended with the ball in Alabama's possession on their 40-yard line.

The second-stringers had done their work. They had effectively battered the Cougars. Coach Hollingberry had been unable to use many substitutes.

Fourth Quarter.

But here came the Alabama regulars again, fresh from a long rest and rearing to go. The substitutes had left them with a first down to work on on their 40-yard stripe.

Monk Campbell tunneled through on a straight plunge for 6 yards. With the defense drawn in close, Suther shook his feet free on a reverse play and sped 29 yards for a first down on the 35-yard line. Then Campbell, spinning into the left side of the Cougar line, stumbling and skidding along in the wake of a personal interferer, got 20 yards and put the leather on the 15-yard line.

Here two penalties checked the march. Six men on the line of scrimmage nullified a fine reverse end run by Suther. And when Moore was rushed on a pass he tossed the ball away and drew a 15-yard penalty for intentionally grounding it. Evantually Cain had to kick over the goal line.

COUGARS RISE.

Then, in a fine frenzy, the Cougars launched a fierce attack. Lainhart struck off left tackle and cut back for a gain of 37 yards. A forward pass to Hill caught the 'Bama secondary flat and he carried it 20 yards down to the Tide's 23-yard line.

After Schwartz had won 3 yards on a cross buck, Sanders shot a bullet pass to Hill for 10 yards and a first down. Again Sanders cocked his arm and flipped to John Hurley for 8 yards. Hurley was tackled on Alabama's 5-yard line.

Schwartz plunged once and bounced back. Again he charged and met a white shirted horde. They knocked the ball out of his arms. Fred Sington dived on it and Alabama had broken up the only serious threat thus far to their goal line. The Cougars had carried the ball 76 yards in 10 plays and fumbled on the 11th. Those red suits were just all wrong.

PASSES FAIL.

Cain kicked out but when Washington came back with another passing attack Cain intercepted one. Here Coach Wade relieved several of his battered regulars with third stringers. Cain was compelled to kick.

Luft, a substitute, took the ball on the fly and came charging back for 20 yards. He and Suther collided and Suther was forced out, badly jarred. A pass to Lainhart netted 9 yards but the Cougars fumbled and Sington recovered.

But immediately Campbell drove through on his spinner and fumbled. Parodi recovered. Coach Wade rushed in more third stringers, among them Johnny Mack Brown's brother, Billy.

The crowd was pouring toward the exits when Lindy Hood, a third string substitute just entered, pulled down a forward pass as if it had been a basketball and lit out for a 5-yard return.

A complete third string was in action for Alabama as the game ended.

first down to Southwest's 40-yard line, but the drive was stopped there and Bodman kicked out on Southwest's 6-yard line. In two runs Hackman and McCarver carried it out 25 yards, and Brown kicked to Midwest's 28-yard line. An exchange of punts gave the Southwest the ball at midfield as the first half ended with the score Southwest 12; Midwest 0.

Third Quarter.

The second half was only two minutes old when Leo Jensvold, dynamic Midwest back, got loose on a cut-back through the line and ran 43 yards to the Southwest's 28-yard line before he was cut down by McCarver, safety man. The threat failed, however, when on the next play Hopper intercepted a Midwest pass on his own 34-yard line.

McCarver and Hopper rang up a first down on the Southwest's 44-yard line but an attempted lateral pass lost 15 yards and Brown punted out on Midwest's 43-yard line and a bushel of subs went in for the Southwest.

A pass to Kissell gained 9 yards and Deig plunged to a first down on Southwest's 45-yard line, but two passes were incomplete and Horn kicked out on Southwest's 25-yard line.

Hopper smashed the Midwest line for 12 yards and first down, then Bethea fumbled a lateral pass from Hackman and Buttner recovered for the Midwest on the 33-yard mark. Kissell hit the line for 5 yards and Jensvold passed to Kissell for 11 more and first down on Southwest's 17-yard line. Kissell was injured on the play and had to leave the game.

Jensvold tried another pass, which was intercepted by Armstrong, big tackle from Missouri, and returned to his own 45-yard line. A pass, Hackman to Wilson, carried to the Midwest 31-yard mark as the quarter ended.

Fourth Quarter.

Hackman opened the final chapter by plunging a first down on Midwest's 21-yard line in three tries. Wilson sifted through for 9 more, but three plays were piled up at the line of scrimmage and the ball went over to Midwest on its own 11-yard stripe.

Failing to gain, the Midwest kicked out to midfield. After two passes were incomplete, Wilson punted out on Midwest's 8-yard line. Bodman kicked right back, and Wilson returned 15 yards to Midwest's 40-yard mark.

On the first play Hackman started to the left, cut back and reversed his field and ran 40 yards for a touchdown. Dales' attempt at point was blocked and the Southwest led, 18 to 0.

The Southwest got right back into Midwest territory after the next kickoff when Jensvold's pass from deep in his own territory was intercepted by Dale on the 24-yard line. The home boys lost 10 yards in three plays from there and Brown kicked out on Midwest's 15-yard line.

Bodman punted a long one back. Brown took it on the bounce and made a beautiful 55-yard return to the Midwest 15-yard line. Two passes to Bethea and Lott made first down on the 4-yard line as the game ended.

AUBURN TIGER BASKET FIVE READY TO GO

Will Tune Up for Conference Schedule With Game Saturday.

AUBURN, Ala., Jan. 1.—The final opposition for the Auburn Tiger basketballers before they start on their 12-game conference schedule will be encountered in alumni gymnasium here, Saturday night, when Frank DuBose's Tallahassee All-Stars will be played in a lone game.

Frank DuBose, All-Southern center on Auburn's 1928 team and captain of the 1929 quintet, will be aided considerably in his effort to win from his former mates by several other ex-wearers of the Orange and Blue on the hardwood.

Cliff "Jelly" Akin, also selected as the best in Dixie while playing with Coach Mike Papke's 1928 team, will play one of the forward berths for Tallahassee. Akin was one of the leading scorers on the Earle Cardinal semi-pro team last season and, along with DuBose, has been very active in basketball circles lately, even though he has graduated from the Cornerstone.

WEEMS BASKIN.

Weems Baskin, assistant coach here, is also expected to perform with the All-Stars. He is working out daily in the gymnasium here and if not watched closely Saturday night is liable to be an unknown springing into prominence by caging several two-pointers. He has no orthodox way of shooting, but manages to locate the baskets just the same. Height and speed as his greatest assets.

In the three practice games staged by the Plainsmen this season, Jack Stewart's work at center has stood out, while the performances of the players at guard and forward have been about on par with each other. The rangy center is the only player who has started every game.

Daviscourt Defeats Zaharias in Feature of Wrestling Program

LARGE CROWD CHEERS HEAVIES AT AUDITORIUM

Milo Steinborn Wins From Blackstock in Semi-Windup Bout.

Dick Daviscourt, Los Angeles heavyweight, defeated George Zaharias, of Memphis, two falls out of three, in the feature event of a New Year's wrestling card at the auditorium Thursday night.

The match lived up to all expectations. It was a wild and wolly affair in which the contestants were bloodsmeared most of the way. Both men were in great condition.

While promoters like to advertise "grudge" fights this one was really that, neither the big Greek nor the California caring at all for each other personally. There were no grudges but what a battle it was!

Zaharias started the elbow blows, a hard blow struck with the flat part of the forearm. It is possible to land punches in this manner almost as hard as those delivered by a boxer's fist.

Daviscourt used a series of headlocks and body slams, intermingled with arm blows, to wear Zaharias down. He was bleeding freely from his nose for 10 minutes before the fall won by Daviscourt. The time was 27 minutes 20 seconds.

Zaharias came back strong with a series of flying tackles and old-fashioned head-butting to Daviscourt's stomach to win the second fall. The time was 14 minutes.

The third one saw Zaharias knocked completely cold as he made a running dive to tackle Daviscourt. He was met in midair by the swinging arm of the big fellow and dropped as if he had been hit by an ax. Time, 3 minutes.

Milo Steinborn defeated Marshall Blackstock in a match which had the spectators on tip-toe all the way. Referee Langford suffered almost as much as the contestants.

Another all-star match was announced for next Wednesday.

About 3,500 people saw the New Year's card and indications are that a great season is ahead for the mat fans.

All the bounding of Borotra availed him nothing against the play of De Buzelet, who won in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4.

GREAT CRIMSON CLUB WON, BELL

Sington Led Alabama in Giving Wade Convincing Farewell Gift.

By Brian Bell.

ROSE BOWL, PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Alabama brought a great football team out of the south to defeat Washington State college, 24 to 0, today in the 16th playing of the annual Tournament of Roses game. Seventy thousand spectators saw the game through in a slight drizzle of rain.

The Crimson Tide went into the game resolved to give Wallace Wade, their coach, who is leaving Alabama for Duke University in North Carolina, a parting gift and they made it a convincing one with three sensational touchdowns in the second period against the husky Cougars.

Washington held its own in the final quarter and threatened to score while Alabama, after scoring a field goal in the third period could not again get its attack to function.

The players from old Alabam', playing with fine precision in the loaded second period, made the contest practically safe beyond recall in this one exciting session.

Two startling passes and a running play wrecked the hopes of the big boys from the northwest.

Coach Wade amazed the home folk and the small contingent from Alabama by sending out his second string to start the game, only Captain "Foots" Clement answering the starting roll call.

Washington State started with a world of power but could not keep the ball rolling and kicks were exchanged as the opposing teams tried each others' prowess and sparred for openings.

In the closing minutes of the first quarter, the Alabama regulars led by the gigantic All-American tackle Freddie Sington and three-fourths of a new backfield composed of Cain, Suther and Campbell rushed on the field.

The new combination did not function at once as a forward pass was messed up, resulting in a 12-yard loss, but in a few minutes the Dixie dynamo began to click.

Washington came with a rush in the final period but a fumble prevented what seemed to be a certain touchdown. In 10 plays, the Cougars drove the ball 76 yards to Alabama's 1-yard line. Here Captain Schwartz fumbled and the eagle-eyed Sington recovered the ball for Alabama.

As the game ended, Washington was tossing and completing passes in a lost cause.

Alabama gave practically every man on the bench a chance to get in the game, climaxing an undefeated season in the Southern conference. Thirty-three 'Bama boys entered the conflict, including Billy Brown, brother of Johnny Mack Brown, movie star, who scored two touchdowns for Alabama in the Rose Bowl game of 1926 when the University of Washington was defeated, 20 to 19.

Alabama presented a powerful team, veteran Rose Bowl observers declaring it superior to the two previous Wade-coached elevens to visit Rose Bowl. The victory left the Crimson Tide without a black mark against it in this competition as in addition to the victory over the University of Washington, Stanford was tied here in 1927.

Washington was in and out, good and bad, but there was no doubt that the better team won.

If there was a better football player on the field than Freddie Sington, the big Alabama tackle, he kept his light under a bushel. Sington, charging low and hard, was the key man in Alabama's offense and defense.

Jimmy Moore completed only two passes for the southerners but each led to a touchdown and his defensive play was of a high caliber.

Mel Hein, a great center, was Washington State's star of the day.

Campbell, with a dash of 42 yards, and Lainhart, speeding 37 yards, made the sensational ball-carrying gains of the day. Holley, too, did his bit for Alabama with two snappy runs.

White Poloists Bow To Red Team, 8-6

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 1.—(AP)—The New Year's polo game between the Reds and the Whites of the 118th field artillery resulted in a victory for the Reds by 8 goals to 6 after many of the players had been switched from one team to the other for general benefit from team play.

The Reds had trailed during the first three periods with the Whites leading with 5 goals to 0. Then Coleman, captain of the Whites, changed over to the Reds, and the Reds began scoring. In the next two chukkers they had run up eight goals, neither team scoring in the final period.

FIRST CHARITY GAME.

The first charity football game played this year was the midseason contest between Villanova and Bucknell for the poor children of the anthracite coal region at Scranton.

Dunlap Wins Fifth Pinehurst Tourney

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 1.—(AP) For the fifth time in six years, George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, today won the annual Pinehurst midwinter golf championship.

The Princeton star and intercollegiate champion vanquished Forbes K. Wilson, of York Harbor, Maine, a Yale linksman, on the 19th hole of as bitter a battle as has been played here in some time.

Although Wilson was never in the lead, he continually dogged the heels of the victor. Eleven holes were halved, so sharply contested was the links duel.

Today's triumph was Dunlap's second over the Yale golfer. He took Wilson's measure two years ago in the final round to win the title for the fourth year in succession.

Last year, Dunlap himself was downed in the championship match by William C. Fownes, Jr., of Pittsburgh. Physicians' orders that he abstain from golf kept Fownes from defending his title this year in the 29th playing of the midwinter event.

JOSE SANTA WINS.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—(UP)—Jose Santa, Portuguese heavyweight giant, won the decision from Roberto Roberti, Italian boxer, in a 10-round bout at Boston arena today.

Cheers and boohs from some 5,000 throats mingled as the decision was announced.

south ever knew. Certainly it is as great as the great teams of Vanderbilt and the magnificent teams of 1917, 1920 and 1928 at Georgia Tech.

It was a team which had everything necessary to win from a strong array of conference teams. We know now that Red Regiment marched through those teams without ever marching at double time.

Vanderbilt gave Alabama her greatest scare. Vanderbilt lost, 12 to 7, and Vanderbilt might easily have won. Yet at no time did Vanderbilt appear to be within yards of the excellence of the Alabama football team.

POUNDING A WALL.

Georgia, a team that found Yale comparatively easy, and defeated New York University, was at a peak for Alabama and lost by two touchdowns.

Southern teams pounded themselves to pieces against the power wall-like defense of the Crimson Tide.

And now we know that Alabama never showed all she had in winning those games. Out of some 18 passes the Tide got three touchdowns. There was never any hint of the lethal passes that broke down the Washington State defense heralded as one of the nation's best.

KNEW IT.

Cagey Wallace Wade knew this football team. He also knew his opponents. The one glimpse he had of them against the Villanova eleven was enough.

Wade did not dare start his second string team against either Vanderbilt or Georgia. Yet against Washington State he was able to use his second team for most of the first quarter and put them back in to start the second half.

It seemed that in this last game the Crimson really showed what it could do.

Passes for touchdowns, runs for touchdowns and even that rare, almost extinct object, the goal from the field, flashed from the Alabama offense as it literally smashed to bits what was undoubtedly a great defense.

The Red Regiment from Tuscaloosa, the Red Elephants, and the Crimson Tide were some of the names given them this year. The last one was an old one probably the best. The Tide rolled on.

Austell Defeats Dallas Preps, 19 to 0

AUSTELL, Ga., Jan. 1.—Led by the versatile "Hoot" Gibson at halfback, the Austell High school grid squad turned in a decisive 19-0 victory over the Dallas prep eleven here this afternoon.

Gibson was the outstanding player of the day. He raced 50 yards to Austell's initial score, was a running threat all afternoon, and in addition did the punting and passing. He also played a good defensive game. Cobb, Gibson's running mate, stepped 60 yards to the second touchdown and Ray Smith snatched a pass to score the final six points.

Ryckeley, Meadows, Baggett and Miller did good work in the Austell line.

Garner led a close race for Dallas honors. He was pressed by Ragsdale, Hill and Lawrence.

McCutcheon, of Atlanta, was solemnized at the Methodist church in Dallas Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. E. C. Swetnan, pastor of the church, performed the ring ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. The candles were lighted by Miss Virginia McCutcheon, sister of the groom, who was beautifully gowned in yellow chiffon and wore a shoulder bouquet of cream roses and valley lilies. An appropriate program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Ethel Maree, of Savannah, at the piano, and Miss Camille Miller, of Savannah, vocalist. "To a Wild Rose" was played during the ceremony.

The ushers were Harold Colquitt, W. A. Foster, Jr., Clarence Lee and Red Hay. The groomsmen were Bill Berry, of Atlanta, and John Hines, of Hogansville. The bridesmaids were Miss Ruth Marchman wearing blue French crepe and Mrs. Burr Stanford, of Cuthbert, wearing pink French crepe with matching accessories. Their flowers were arm bouquets of pink roses. The maid of honor, Miss Martha Hay, cousin of the bride, wore pale green crepe fashioned along princess lines with hat and shoes of the same soft shade. Her flowers were pink rosebuds showered with valley lilies. Little Miss Ann Lee, niece of the bride, and little Ida Mae Hammond, niece of the groom, were flower girls and wore dainty costumes of pink tulle and carried old-fashioned bouquets.

The bride entered with her brother, Paul Croker, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, C. C. McCutcheon, of Atlanta. Her brunette beauty was enhanced by her costume of orchid French crepe made with tight bodice and circular skirt, a bertha of duchess lace being the only trimming. Her hat and shoes were of a darker shade and her flowers were a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a diamond brooch, the gift of the groom.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Croker. The rooms were elaborately decorated with quantities of ferns and pink roses. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Croker were the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. P. T. McCutcheon, Sr., of Franklin, parents of the groom, and the members of the wedding party. Mesdames R. R. Lee, Mrs. Omar Lam, of Hogansville; Mrs. Joe I. Matthews and Mrs. Hubert Croker assisted in entertaining. An imported cut-work cloth was used on the tea table, with the wedding cake as a central decoration, while pink candles in silver holders stood at the four corners of the table. Mrs. Croker wore black chiffon, and Mrs. McCutcheon wore lavendar crepe, and their shoulder bouquets were of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon left for a motor trip to various places of interest in Florida. The bride's going away costume was a charming ensemble of French blue cloth with a Lapin collar and matching accessories.

Mrs. McCutcheon is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Croker, of Dallas. She is a graduate of the Dallas High school and of the Georgia State College, at Milledgeville and for the past two years she has been a member of the faculty of the Sparta High school. Business sessions will be held today and tomorrow, with the annual banquet scheduled for tonight.

"This convention," declared Winship Nunnally, president of the organization, "marks the entry of the company upon its fifty-first year. For practically all this time Nunnally's has been known the country over as a manufacturer of fine package candies. Although the past year was admittedly an unusual one in most lines, we felt it was the time for aggressive merchandising and advertising and, backing up our convictions, launched an advertising campaign last fall which was the biggest in our history."

Robert Strickland, Jr., vice president of the First National Bank of Atlanta, will address the sales sessions this morning on the "Outlook for 1931." Other addresses will be made by Mr. Nunnally, A. S. Hopkins, vice president of the company; D. P. Whichel, manager of the candy departments, and B. B. Freitag, eastern division manager.

Gottschaldt, president of the Gottschaldt-Humphrey advertising agency, and an address by W. J. Toland, sales manager of the Nunnally Company. 5-DAY WORK WEEK URGED BY AHRENS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Theodore Ahrens, president of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation, addressed the annual New Year reception of the Louisville Board of Trade today, advocated a five-day working week with six days' pay as the solution of the unemployment problem.

Ahrens said the advent of machinery and various labor-saving devices has resulted in a serious problem for men employed in factories and shops. He said it may be necessary eventually to adopt a six-hour day.

A telegram from H. M. Feed, president of the Standard Manufacturing Company, read by Ahrens, announced the company has orders for 800 car loads of enameling work to be turned out by the plant in Louisville and other plants of the company in various parts of the country during January and February. Ahrens said the orders will furnish work for the present employes and 1,000 additional workers in Louisville during the winter months and at least that many more in other plants of the company.

"I believe we have reached the bottom of this depression," Ahrens said, "and while recovery may be slow, it will be steady."

MILLION-DOLLAR LOAN FOR CITY IS PROPOSED

Comptroller West Urges Loan To Cover Deficit and Provide Cash.

With the city facing a 1931 deficit of approximately $687,000, B. Graham West, comptroller, Thursday, after inspecting the financial records of the borough, said that he would go before council Monday night and recommend that a temporary loan of $1,000,000 be obtained in order to place financial operations on a prompt payment basis during the year.

Actual deficit of $209,593.60 was shown at the close of business by the comptroller's books, it was said, and pay rolls for Atlanta's schools for December must be met within the next few days, increasing this deficit to $447,731.60. The total deficit of $687,000 will be caused by the shrinkage in fi. fa. values because of the existence of a large number of uncollectable tax executions, this loss being in the neighborhood of $240,000.

The finance committee of council will be called upon to consider the deficit when it begins preparation of the new 1931 budget. At the same time Mr. West will go before the reorganization meeting of council and ask for the loan of $1,000,000 to provide cash to operate the various borough departments and meet pay rolls until this year's current revenue begins to come in.

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

MAKING THE MOST OF THEIR SNOWSHOES.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Each one is with some talent blest,
And with it each should do his best.
—Jumper the Hare.

Jumper the Hare had been frightened half out of his wits by two explosions in the snow almost under his very nose. Each had been accompanied by a roar quite as startling as the explosion itself. Before he could gather his wits he was already running away as fast as those long, strong legs of his could take him. Having nothing wherewith to fight for his life, Jumper must always run for it, so the instant he is frightened, even before he has the least idea what has frightened him, he is off.

"Qwit, qwit," said a familiar voice.

"Qwit, qwit," repeated another familiar voice.

Jumper stopped almost as suddenly as he had started off. He turned to look back. There, with a twinkle in their eyes, stood Thunderer the Grouse and Mrs. Grouse. "Of course it would be you," said Jumper without appearing to be the least embarrassed by his headlong flight. "If you would only let a fellow know beforehand that you are going to burst out in that sudden fashion it would save his nerves. How long were you down there under the snow?"

"All through the last half of the storm," replied Thunderer. "We waited until the snow was deep enough for us to plunge into it and go out of sight. Then we remained there while the storm covered the places where we had entered. When we came out just now we didn't know that you were anywhere about. There is no way for us to know who may be close at hand, so we find it the wisest plan to break out suddenly with a roar of wings so as to startle Reddy Fox or

"Of course, it would be you!" said Jumper.

Yowler the Bob Cat or any other enemy who might happen to be within jumping distance. My, but that was a storm!"

"It was so," replied Jumper. "You are the first people I have seen this morning although I have heard Blacky the Crow and Sammy Jay in the distance. I see you have on your snowshoes. You'll need them if you are going to walk about much. Yes, sir, you'll need them. I don't know what I would do without mine—starve to death, I guess."

Mrs. Grouse held up one foot and looked at it. "Yes," said she, "we have our snowshoes. I really don't know how we could get along without them. If we didn't have them we would have to remain in the trees most of the time while the snow is soft and that would not suit us at all. Every time I take a step I realize how fortunate we are to have these snowshoes. The snow is pretty soft now, but as soon as it settles a little or there is the least bit of crust, we will be able to run about in comfort."

As Mrs. Grouse held up her foot and spread wide her toes Jumper could see that each toe was lined on each side with little horny points which served the same purpose as the hair on his own long toes, making the foot big and broad and so less likely to sink into the snow. Mrs. Grouse shook the snow out of her feathers and Mr. Grouse did the same thing. Then, when they had nicely settled all their feathers in place, they started off to look for breakfast. The deep snow made it easy for them to reach certain buds of which they are fond. Very trim and handsome they looked against the white snow and it was a joy to see them moving about, making the most of their snowshoes.

Seeing them picking buds reminded Jumper that he had started out for a breakfast, so with a "See you later" he continued on his way, traveling with ease where even his much smaller cousin, Peter Rabbit, could not have gone. He liked this snow and he knew that Thunderer and Mrs. Grouse liked it, and all because they had snowshoes.

HUGH WALLACE, FORMER ENVOY TO FRANCE, DIES

Was Appointed French Ambassador in 1919 by Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Hugh Campbell Wallace, former ambassador to France, died today. He was 67.

Heart disease, with which Mr. Wallace had been afflicted for some time, was the cause of death. He had been confined to bed for several weeks.

HUGH C. WALLACE.

Mrs. Wallace and a niece who resides in Paris, France, were with him at the end.

Born at Lexington, Mo., Mr. Wallace was active in councils of the democratic party for many years.

He never sought public office. His public service consisted of two years as receiver of public moneys of Utah, to which he was appointed by President Cleveland, and as United States ambassador to France from 1919 to 1921, to which post he was named by President Wilson.

On his last visit to France the former ambassador presented to the American embassy in Paris a valuable collection of books on Franco-American relations. President Hoover acknowledged the gift to the American government in a cablegram to Mr. Wallace.

Mr. Wallace was elected a member of the democratic national committee from Washington in 1892 and again in 1896, but resigned before completing his second term. He was elected again in 1916. He was chosen frequently as delegate to the democratic national conventions and took an active part in the campaigns of 1912 and 1916 in which Woodrow Wilson was elected president.

Just before sailing for the United States in October, Mr. Wallace suffered from heart trouble.

MRS. FLORENCE PORTER.

During the War Between the States he was twice wounded in battle and received the Confederate cross for bravery in action.

DR. SHELDON W. CUMMINGS.

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Dr. Sheldon W. Cummings, 66, head of the Bible department of Redlands University, at Redlands, Cal., died today following an operation.

He had been at Redlands University the last eight years.

PROFESSOR J. P. SMITH.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Professor James Perrin Smith, 66, retired professor of geology at Stanford University, died at his home here today.

Professor Smith was famous as a paleontologist.

C. LEE MOORE.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 1.—(AP)—C. Lee Moore, 68, state auditor of public accounts for the last 19 years, dropped dead in a downtown hotel late today. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Mr. Moore had been a public servant for 46 years. He entered the state auditor's office as a clerk in 1884 and after several promotions was appointed auditor early in 1912. In his near half century of service he took only one vacation. That was 25 years ago.

REV. C. W. BLODGETT.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Rev. Charles W. Blodgett, 85, retired Methodist Episcopal clergyman and former national patriotic instructor and chaplain-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, died here today.

$8,924,099 IN BUILDING PERMITS HERE IN 1930

Borough Inspector's Report Shows 3,475 Permits Issued in Year.

Three thousand, four hundred and seventy-five building permits, providing for expenditure of $8,924,099, were issued in Atlanta during 1930, it was revealed Thursday in the annual report of C. J. Brown, borough building inspector.

In 1929, records show, 3,270 permits, calling for a $13,212,611 construction program, were listed.

During the year just closed, the report says, permits were given for the building of dwellings sufficient to house 793 families. Permits for the erection of four office buildings with a total valuation of $2,884,000 and 351 frame residences with a valuation of $1,128,749 were shown in the report. Construction of 64 brick business houses entailing an expediture of $722,200 also was contemplated in applications received by the inspector during the year.

For repairs and alteration of various types of structures at a cost of $1,562,181, more than 1,840 permits were granted.

The December report shows that 179 permits were issued during the 31-day period, representing an expenditure of $327,473.

ALCOHOLISM TOLL HEAVY IN GOTHAM

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—As an aftermath of New Year's Eve celebrations, approximately 75 men and women were treated for alchoholism in New York hospitals.

Only one death, and that indirectly due to intoxication, was reported. Michael Pisko, 35, while lying in bed in his apartment was asphixiated by smoke when a small fire occurred.

Two youths wer shot and slightly wounded by a celebrator using a .22-caliber rifle. Police arrested James E. Walser, 23, on a charge of felonious assault. Ruben Brick, 21, was shot in the right hip, and Joseph Michaels, 19, in the left heel.

Police declared the number of intoxicated persons on the streets last night was unusually large, even for a New Year's Eve. Many fights and several minor automobile accidents were attributed to drunkenness.

4 Die in Holiday Row.

CEFN HENGOED, Wales, Jan. 1. (AP)—A jealous quarrel which left four dead and one dying in its wake settled the blight of tragedy today over this little village. Henry Richards, 25, unemployed miner, killed his wife, Violet, their two-year-old child and a neighbor, William Roberts, and then committed suicide.

White House Usher Begins 41st Year

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Presidents may come and presidents may go but Irvin Hoover, generally known as "Ike," stays on at the White House.

He entered his forty-first year of service there today. He has been the chief usher for years, but came first to the executive mansion in another capacity during the administration of President Harrison.

The duties of the chief usher are many and varied, but he gets his greatest pleasure each year in handling the huge new year crowds. He has been present at every one for the 41 years.

TENNESSEE WOMAN HELD FOR MURDER

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Mrs. Walter Harris, 28, was being held today to answer to a charge of murder as a result of the death of her father-in-law, James E. Harris, 57, of gunshot wounds. An argument over ownership of a cow is said to have preceded the shooting at the home of the young woman yesterday. Mrs. Harris said she shot in self-defense—that Harris had been drinking and was threatening her.

The slain man was a grandson of Isham Harris, Civil War governor of Tennessee.

OFFICERS THWART MISSISSIPPI MOB

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Warren county officers today apparently foiled mob violence when they placed in an unannounced jail Waddell Cosey, negro, charged with killing William Davis, plantation bookkeeper, near Vicksburg.

The negro was captured in Tallulah, La., early today, brought to Vicksburg and then spirited away to another point. He was believed to be in the Hinds county jail here, but the county jailer said he had not yet received the negro, although he expected him.

Guarding their movements with the utmost secrecy the Warren county officers appeared to have thwarted a mob that is reported to have trailed the car bearing Cosey and officers toward Jackson.

NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN EDITOR RESIGNS POST

Mr. Finney said he resigned in order to devote his time to the interests of the Columbia Daily Herald, of which he is part owner and former editor, and to his farm at Culleoka.

"PROSPERITY BILL" REACHES NATION'S DECK IN 1930

Stock Market Seldom Able To Shake Bearish Capers

BY JOHN L. COOLEY,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The task of teaching the unpleasant lessons of practical economics to another large class of security owners went forward almost without a recess in 1930.

Whoever had matriculated in the bull market as a freshman got a rapid but thorough education in profit and loss, and emerged from the year's schooling with the experience of a post-graduate.

During the first three months the stock market fed on a rich diet of hopes. Prices climbed almost steadily from early in January until the first week in April.

The composite price of 90 representative shares rose in that interval from 168 to 205. Many traders, both amateur and professional, would have been surprised could they have known that the latter figure was to be the year's high.

Rallies Short-Lived.

The market then turned pessimistic and by late June had lost so much ground that it bore some resemblance to the lean figure that had startled investors in November, 1929.

On June 24 prices reached an average of 154, or 12 points above the low of the previous year.

However, there was to be no surrender without a further skirmish and prices slowly recovered. By late July the composite had risen to around 173, but progress was arrested by the drouth and the market had some weak moments in August.

By the end of that month, reassurances that business surely would pick up in the autumn found enough listeners to promote a rally that carried over Labor Day and prices returned to the July highs.

Those levels, however, proved to be formidable resistance points.

Bears Warned of Method.

By mid-September the market had started one of the most persistent declines on record. Sentiment became frankly pessimistic. Day after day prices slipped off, not on large turnover, but with a monotony that told a story of steady liquidation.

Wild rumors sprang up, all fantastic, none true. Short selling reached considerable proportions.

The Stock Exchange stepped in to prevent willful misrepresentation. There was no desire, officials explained, to curtail legitimate bearish activity, but it was necessary, they emphasized, that there be no malicious attacks designed to undermine confidence.

Several prominent bear operators were questioned and warned. Stocks suddenly became very hard to borrow. Professional selling virtually disappeared and the market got a breathing spell.

Lowest In Three Years.

The decline was resumed in November when the June lows were broken for the first time, and stocks sold at the lowest quotations in three years.

And by mid-December the November minimums had been punctured.

Sharp contraction of railroad traffic and the attendant reduction in earnings brought the carrier shares into marked disfavor; in fact they finally receded to the lowest levels since 1925.

Extremely unfavorable conditions in the oil and copper industries, despite progress toward production curtailment, deflated both groups heavily, especially later in the year.

Other industrials dropped as earnings fell off. Utilities, which had been the leaders in more prosperous times, lost their speculative flavor.

Throughout the year trading was orderly. There was one 3,000,000 share day—May 5—a couple of 6,000,000 share turnovers and several sessions in which 5,000,000 shares changed hands, but the average was not large.

HUGE NATURAL GAS LINES WILL OPEN IN '31

BY E. G. DIEFENBACH,
President, G. E. Barrett & Co.

The natural gas industry in 1931 will complete the most important development and expansion program in its history. More than 4,000 miles of major pipe lines now under construction will be put in operation during 1931. These lines, with a capacity of upward of 500,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas a day, will supply a number of the principal industrial markets of the country. The coming year, moreover, will be marked by the probable interconnection of the eastern and western gas-producing areas, and further stabilization of the industry, which in the last few years has, to a large extent, been brought under the control of leading public utility companies.

Hardly another American industry can point to a period of growth comparing with that of the natural gas industry for the ten years just ended, when natural gas emerged from a localized status to its present super-gas position, ranking alongside the electric and manufactured gas public utilities.

Consumption of natural gas in this country during 1930 is estimated to have approached the 2,000,000,000,000 cubic feet mark, compared with less than 40 per cent of that volume in 1920. Today there are more than 5,250,000 natural gas consumers, compared with half that number ten years back. The investment in natural gas enterprises now totals approximately $2,250,000,000, compared with less than half that amount ten years ago. Based on projects in progress, the present total will be further increased during the ensuing year.

The long term outlook of the industry continues promising. Smaller producing and distributing organizations are still to be absorbed by major companies to round out their systems, thereby safeguarding the demands of both domestic and industrial consumers and assuring them of benefits from greater economies in operation. While it is evident from a glance at a map of the pipe line systems of the country that many major projects are already completed or under construction, other extensions are yet to be built as soon as more favorable conditions for financing occur. Furthermore, branches from existing main pipe line may be expected gradually to make available this fuel to numerous smaller communities now waiting to be served.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY TAKES HEART FOR '31

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A considerable trace of optimism follows the textile industry into the new year.

Depressed for a decade, the trade recently has seen distribution running ahead of production. A steady flow of small orders has kept stocks steadily decreasing since November and post-inventory purchases may start mill wheels humming in more pronounced cadence.

Merchants are hopeful the national campaign for wider use of cotton goods, entered into by the department of agriculture and commerce at the direction of congress, may bring about new cotton uses. Wool interests are showing sentiment for similar assistance, which is interpreted to indicate that the cotton campaign is beginning to show results.

Manufacturers of textiles have been encouraged greatly during the last two months by a noticeable stiffening in buying orders. They have gone through a trying period without dumping their stocks on the market and are inclined to bargain for longer profits now that buyers appear to be about ready to look for supplies.

Meanwhile they have gone pretty extensively into sales psychology and are said to have been very successful with novelty packaging of household necessities and combinations which are offered in sets.

Imports of silk and rayon are smaller than a year ago. Consumption of wool by textile mills and spindle activity in the cotton industry is believed indicative of a presently wider use of domestic materials.

Wall Street Briefs.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The new year for the financial world will begin tomorrow, after an interruption of business for the New Year's holiday today. The New York Stock and Curb Exchanges, banks and commodity markets will re open.

The decrease in net earnings for American railways probably will represent a better relative showing than the industrial average, notwithstanding the co-operation of the railways, at heavy expense, to keep up normal programs of capital improvement and maintenance, a statement to stockholders by International Carriers, Ltd., says.

John J. Evans, president of the Armstrong Cork Co., in a letter to stockholders today said the outlook for recovery in the floor covering industry, based on sentiment among wholesalers and retailers of these lines, augurs well for a gradual improvement in the volume of sales.

Six thousand employes are to return to work tomorrow at the Dayton (Ohio) plants of the Frigidaire Corp., a General Motors Corp. subsidiary.

F. J. Lisman, who has been a member of the New York Stock Exchange for 35 years and originally purchased his seat for $18,500, has sold his membership for $200,000. The commission business of his firm, F. J. Lisman & Co., is being taken over by Morrison & Townsend, members of the exchange.

Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount Publix Corp., said today his company planned to increase by "many millions" in 1931 the $75,000,000 spent on new pictures in 1930. The advertising budget will also be larger.

Duplan Silk Corp. and consolidated subsidiaries reported today for the six months ended November 30, net profit of $270,304, equal to about 26 cents a share on 349,800 common shares outstanding November 30, or about 40 cents a share on 300,000 shares now outstanding.

BOND SLUMP BRINGS WALL STREET 'BLUES'

BY DONALD C. BOLLES,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The bond market budded but failed to bloom in 1930.

D. C. Bolles.

It gave some promise of flowering in the fertile investment field crated by sharp reversals of speculators in stocks, but was a drooping, wilted thing at the close—suffering like all markets from low levels.

In a general way there was a good market for gilt-edged obligations for about eight months of the year, and a poor one for the remainder of the 12 months.

Both institutions and the investing public contributed to a selling climax in the final quarter, which depressed all groups except the very stable United States governments to depths unexplored since 1925.

Commercial banks seldom have turned so strongly to bonds as they did in 1930. Weekly reporting banks of the federal reserve system, constituting about 40 per cent of the nation's banking resources, bought more than a billion dollar's worth of bonds in 1930.

But the private investor evinced no more than passing interest in the second and third grade bonds that are dependent on his support—and they followed stocks downward, while the investor bought much the same type of securities acquired by institutions.

In times of depression Wall Street normally looks to bonds for signs of fair weather ahead, but even that solace was lacking in the gloom of this year's bond market.

PRODUCTION OF STEEL SAGS SHARPLY IN 1930

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The steel industry, that reliable barometer of business activity, spent most of 1930 in steady retreat before the rough weather of depression.

However, it is confidently expecting the skies to clear early in 1931, for in the past decade a spring recovery has never failed to appear.

With steel's best customers, the railroads, automobile makers and building contractors, curtailing their orders, operations fell almost constantly from the year's high level set in February.

Prices also slumped until, in November, producers made a stand for stabilization, a move that was followed early in December by an increase in certain basic lines.

Output of pig iron and steel ingots dropped to the smallest totals since 1924. Operations, which had been stepped up briskly during the boom period of 1928-29, declined to less than half of the year's best levels attained in February, when ingot production averaged close to 85 per cent of capacity.

Incidentally, this early expansion of activity gave impetus to the premature bull market in stocks during the early spring.

Prices of finished steel, pig iron and heavy melting scrap dropped to new lows for several years, although the first-named price held steady for more than two months late in 1930.

Seasonal improvement in the fall was disappointing. Inquiries by pipe line companies and some construction projects helped the producers' order books for a time, but buying by the railroads was less than normal and the stagnation of the automotive business kept that important customer on the sidelines.

It is estimated that net earnings of the large companies will be 40 to 50 per cent below 1929.

Hopes that low inventories would force customers into the market proved largely unfounded, although the producers are still confident that depleted stocks will provide the basis for the anticipated upturn in the first three months of 1931.

CAN INDUSTRY SEES BIGGER 1931 DEMAND

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—O. C. Huffman, president of the Continental Can Company, Inc., says his concern will start 1931 with extremely low inventories and improved facilities to meet an anticipated increase in demand for tin containers in 1931.

The industry as a whole, he says, is in excellent shape to start the new season with minimum stocks carried over from last year's pack, and a constantly increasing consumption. The industry's combined output for 1930 was about normal despite a decrease in some sections due to the drouth.

Commodity Prices for 1931 Depend on Reduced Acreage

BY ELMER C. WALZER,
United Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The extent of recovery in the commodity price situation during 1931 will depend to a vast extent on drastic reduction in acreage which present low prices, it is confidently expected, will bring, according to agricultural leaders.

During 1930, the feature of the business depression was the deflation of all commodity prices. All farm crops for the year are estimated by the government at a valuation of $6,274,824,000, a decline of 27 per cent from the $8,675,420,000 valuation in 1929. This year's was the lowest valuation since 1921 when it was $5,675,877,000.

Acreage this year was high at 366,507,000 acres, against 364,522,000 acres in 1930.

Comparison of this year's principal crops with last in dollar value follows:

Crop	1930 Valuation	1929 Valuation
Corn	$1,378,874,000	$2,048,134,000
Winter wheat	388,627,000	616,128,000
Spring wheat	127,780,000	224,793,000
All wheat	517,407,000	840,921,000
Oats	453,973,000	538,445,000
Rye	20,895,000	35,371,000
Cotton	674,044,000	1,225,032,000

Sharp Depression.

The foregoing commodities have been depressed sharply. July wheat recently sold at the lowest levels since 1901, while rye touched the lowest levels since 1896. The entire group averaged the lowest since 1915.

In addition to the declines in the farm crops other commodity prices made new lows for many years, a long list for all time. Sugar, coffee, rubber, silk and silver made record lows. Copper made a new low for this century at 9 1-2 cents a pound, 3 1-2 cents a pound under the average cost of production of 13 cents.

The decline in silk was especially significant to cotton producers. From the September, 1929, high of $5.40 a pound raw silk dropped to $2.39 a pound in October, 1930, a decline of 55.7 per cent.

This drop in silk values, according to Jerome Lewine, president of the National Raw Silk Exchange, is being passed on to consumers. Lewine said:

"Not only has raw silk been drastically deflated, but investigations have also shown that the price of silk goods in department stores has undergone the greatest reduction as compared with any other type of merchandise.

"All indications are that raw silk will move during 1931 within a fairly narrow price range and that, consequently, the price advantage enjoyed by silk will be retained. For this reason it is believed that consumption of raw silk during 1931 will be extremely large, particularly when there is a turn for the better in the general economic situation."

Foreign Cotton.

This statement by Lewine is evidence of one form of competition for the cotton grower. The other is foreign cotton which is said to be of better quality and cheaper even than our own. Chairman Alexander Legge of the federal farm board, however, has stated that the present cotton prices indicated that the acreage next year would be cut 10,000,000 to 14,000,000 acres and that cotton prices would advance materially within the next 10 months.

The wheat situation is not as easily solved, nor is that of other grains. The farm board through its stabilization corporation holds vast amounts of wheat. The high American price precludes export. Import is out of the question due to imposition of a 42-cent a bushel tariff. Here also is a prospect of a drastic reduction in acreage. This cut must be sufficient to eliminate prospects of export, according to some farm board officials in view of the increase in Russian production.

Speaking of American business and industry, John A. Bunnell, president of the Chicago Board of Trade said: "Judging from other periods of depression, the downward movement has begun to ebb with the inevitable upward turn in prospects for the months ahead."

Regarding agriculture, however, Bunnell said the problem was more complex.

"Grain farmers have experienced one of their most trying years," he said, "and so has our entire grain industry.

"The federal farm board, created by the agricultural marketing act, is again endeavoring through its agencies to maintain certain values while in other countries prices have continued to decline. Time will tell the result of such efforts."

Farm Income Down.

Outside of wheat and cotton, Bunnell said, "both of which have been overproduced throughout the world, farm income is about 84 per cent of its 1928 figure. This showing is encouraging when it is realized that the average wholesale prices of other primary goods, such as non-ferrous metals, have fallen to 76 per cent of 1928, according to official figures."

The same reason that brought wheat down was also partly responsible for a drop in coffee and sugar futures. In coffee the situation was precarious. Brazil, largest producer, has a huge surplus on hand. The government has attempted thus far unsuccessfully to cope with the situation. During a brief period when revolution made shipments from Brazil light, futures rose in New York. They declined after the revolt had subsided. Sugar made new lows for all time, dropping below a cent a pound for the raw product.

Regarding the coffee and sugar situation, Benjamin B. Peabody, president of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange, said:

"When prices have suffered extensive declines in commodities like coffee and sugar, a natural economic result to be expected is an increase in consumption. When prudent dealers in these commodities define a stabilized level, they regain confidence and attempt to contemplate future wants by carrying larger stocks."

Scarcity of Cocoa.

Cocoa production was unique among the commodities. Instead of any serious overproduction ahead there looms the possibility of scarcity of supplies, according to officials of the New York Cocoa Exchange. And yet cocoa is selling in the neighborhood of 6 1-4 cents a pound, against 9 1-4 cents at the beginning of the year. The loss of 40 per cent is attributed to drop in consumption and the general depression. Producers enter 1931 with low inventories.

All other commodities are down sharply from where they were a year ago. As this is written, butter is at 30 cents a pound, against 40 a year ago; coffee at 7 cents a pound, against 9 1-2; eggs 36 1-2 cents a dozen, against 61 cents; potatoes $3.50 a barrel, against $6; flour $4.40, against $6.35; granulated sugar 4.65 cents a pound, against 6 cents, and tea 14 cents a pound, against 18 cents. The foregoing are wholesale prices as given by R. G. Dun & Co.

A feature of the live stock situation was a change in the position of some meats. Lamb and mutton topped the list in price having dropped to second place in the three principal meats. Pork climbed to the top. Beef dropped to last place from second.

"The livestock industry should have another good year," John A. Bunnell, Chicago Broad of Trade president, said. "Cheaper food should offset any loss in live stock prices. And it should be remembered that the New York and Chicago demand for baby meat is being met by fattening cattle in a single year instead of in four as formerly."

As regards some of the stable metals like steel and copper, efforts have been made toward stabilization. Steel companies, veterans in meeting all conditions, cut production to 38 per cent of capacity. They have taken steps toward stabilizing prices for 1931. Copper producers have made progress toward curtailing output. They have had little success so far as maintaining a price is concerned, but the outlook is for improvement once demand reappears.

RCA HEAD PREDICTS STABLER PROSPERITY

BY DAVID SARNOFF,
President, Radio Corporation of America.

Prosperity faces a new turning point in 1931. The forward march of industry, I am confident, will begin under the stimulus of new developments from the laboratory, new services to the public and new industries which initiative and necessity will combine to create. The one inescapable fact of our experience is that whenever and whatever the occasion of an industrial crisis, the country has come out at least one step ahead—always with higher standards of living, higher wages and a new industrial prosperity. We have been going through the valley of depression, but it is the depth of the valley that makes the mountain so high.

The barometer of depression is always clear enough—changing colors on the balance sheet, receding stock quotations, reduced consumption and sales, facts and figures of unemployment. But the ascending signs of prosperity are rarely evident until prosperity is fully upon us. It is inevitable that it should be so. The scientist, the research man, the technician—these do not work with the blare of fight and drum. What goes on in the laboratory does not become news until research is translated into a new invention, a new service, or a new product.

The fact of greatest promise to renewed prosperity in many of our leading industries, I believe, is that for the last 18 months, old Mother Necessity, with sleeves rolled up, has been busy in the leading laboratories of the nation. We have been going through an industrial phase where production and consumption, the forces of supply and demand, have constantly sought to outstrip each other; we are coming to see that true prosperity lies in the balancing of these forces. But that does not mean the world can, or will, restrict its needs. On the contrary, not by slowing up industry, but by speeding up research, shall we solve our problems.

Improved Autos At No Extra Cost Promised in '31

BY DAVID J. WILKIE.

DETROIT, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A "greatly advanced product" at no advance in price will be the motor car industry's bid for prosperity in 1931.

All along the line new models have been introduced or mechanical improvements made in models that are to be held over, and in all of them manufacturing economies have made possible what automobile sales executives describe as "higher dollar value."

Confident that the period of curtailed buying has been put behind the industry looks forward to the coming year with every expectation of close to normal production and consumption. "Normal" production would mean a total output in 1931 of 4,500,000 cars and trucks.

What few models remain to be introduced will be presented at the national automobile show in New York, January 3 to 10. Among these, unless present plans go awry, will be a 16-cylinder front drive.

Other mechanical improvements in new models have been confined largely to increasing the engine power to provide quicker acceleration. There has been increased use of down draft carburetion and further application of silent gear shifting principles.

Stabilization is the industry's objective for 1931. One of the factors expected to contribute most in that direction is the virtual certainty that all of the new models will hold throughout the coming year, with no new midsummer models.

U.S. POWER INDUSTRY'S ACHIEVEMENTS HAILED

BY FLOYD L. CARLISLE,
Chairman of Board, Niagara Hudson Power Corporation.

The year 1931 will be one of challenge to the electric light and power corporations and to all public utility companies. Every officer and director should more than ever be looking forward intelligently and be aggressive to do his job better. What is that job? It is to manufacture, transmit and distribute electricity at the lowest possible cost, which necessitates keeping the properties in the best condition to render service and earnings a fair and just return for the bond and share holders.

If that job is properly done, the companies will obtain from the savings of investors throughout the world at least $1,000,000,000 of fresh capital with which to build new power plants, transmission lines and distribution facilities that are absolutely necessary to supply the increased demands for electricity. All new factories and many existing ones will be more highly electrified than ever before because it is the modern, efficient thing to do. The new houses, farm buildings, apartment houses, office buildings, schools, hospitals, garages, theaters, stores, miniature golf courses and airports must be supplied with electricity for light and power service of innumerable varieties and importance.

Wages Prove Aid.

At least $650,000,000 of the total requirements of new capital will be paid out in wages to mine and fabricate copper, aluminum, steel and other metals, to manufacture the delicate and highly specialized machinery which generate the electrical energy, to build transmission lines, towers and cables and to provide the innumerable special things necessary to bring the service to its ultimate user; 250,000 highly paid and highly skilled workmen will support their families from these wages and have enough left over to buy new automobiles, radios and many other things.

The public utility companies of the country, including gas and electric, railroads and telephones, will pay $400,000,000 in taxes to the villages, towns, cities, school districts, states and the federal government. Even United States senators and representatives will get part of their salaries from these taxes. All the great departments of government all over the land, war, navy and agriculture, will flourish from this income. The Congressional Record will doubtless print many speeches crying down the electric light and power companies and a very considerable portion of the cost will be paid by them. Nor will the tax collecting agencies of the government stop here. Holders of the bonds and stocks of the public utility companies will pay federal and state income taxes upon their interest and dividends of at least another $200,000,000. Death taxes, taxes of all kinds on incorporations, stock issues, profits and the sale of property and securities will take another huge slice. All of these will be real contributions to the prosperity of the year 1931.

Government Ownership Hit.

I have never believed that the sober thinking citizens of the United States would really go for government ownership because of the great losses in tax revenues that could not possibly be replaced except by increasing the already great burdens upon every other class of taxpayers.

The public utility companies have grown in the past without government subsidies; have year by year paid greater proportions of taxes; have in the face of higher costs of plants and wages been able to obtain their new capital on reasonable terms and have, too, for many years past, gradually lowered their rates. This is an achievement which cannot be passed by lightly.

Because of the great growth of the business and the romance of the electric age, it has attracted hosts of critics. Political patent medicines are constantly advertised. Many able and honest educators and economists have new schemes for regulating and running the business, but the case for a radical change has not been made. The fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution of the United States guarantees to its citizens that their property will not be taken without due process of law and that means that properties in the public service may earn a fair return. Changes in regulation to circumvent this sound rule will be futile. The electric light and power companies by sound and intelligent management and by keeping everlastingly at their job in 1931 will contribute materially to bring the country out of its present business slump, the end of which certainly cannot be very far distant.

KENT BLAMES POLITICS FOR BUSINESS UNREST

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The menace to the world at the moment is more political than economic, says Fred I. Kent, director of the Bankers Trust Company.

"Business," he says, "if it is not borne down by unfortunate taxation, government competition, and false regulation can right itself this coming year beyond any question of doubt.

"Whether it will be left free to do so the people must decide, not only in America but in many countries of the world."

Ship of Industry Laid Up In 'Dry Dock' for Repairs

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The great ship, Industry, was laid up for repairs in the year 1930.

She went into dry dock in June, rather unexpectedly, but scheduled to resume service in autumn. The job was found to involve complex technical problems, however, and she is still laid up.

But engineers say the job is no more serious than any of the periodic general overhaulings that have been required since she was launched.

They have been rather severely taken to task, of course, for taking so much time with the job and for failing to estimate its full extent in the first place, so to avoid further embarrassment they are now making no definite promises, but word has gone around that she will be in the water by spring, and under full steam by autumn.

Not So Seaworthy.

Indeed, the necessity of laying up the vessel at all came as something of a shock. After that topheavy superstructure of inflated share values was carried away in the stock market storm of late 1929, the ship seemed more seaworthy than ever.

In fact, almost everyone was taking comfort in the belief that such progress had been made in the handling of the ship that all necessary readjustments were being made while under way. It was, supposedly, a "new era" in industrial navigation.

Economists have offered numerous theories to explain these periodic depressions, and despite lack of agreement as to causes and preventives, their characteristics are well understood.

Recoveries Follow Drops.

In the past 55 years, there have been eight major depressions. In each case, recovery has set in after a downward deviation of between 20 and 25 per cent from the normal upward trend as calculated on the average gain over several years.

The Standard Statistics index of industrial production has dropped about 25 per cent in the past 12 months. A chart shows that in December, 1929, it crossed the "normal trend" line at the index figure 120. December, 1930, finds it close to 90, or down 25 per cent.

On the basis of long experience, this should prove the approximate bottom.

Overproduction, and its complement, underconsumption, are the most commonly offered diagnoses of the present complaint. Science has vastly expanded the productive capacity of the individual worker—in factory and mine, and on the farm, as well—in the past few years. The problem of technological unemployment, the replacement of men by machines, again looms up ominously.

Machine-Age Problem.

But it is an old problem which has troubled the progress of the industrial revolution from its start. And it is being met more successfully than in the past.

Men replaced by machines in the great boom of the past few years found employment for a time in the field of distribution, or sales and related services.

But with intense competitive struggle for markets, domestic and foreign, distributive machinery was expanded to a great, cumbersome and costly thing. It consumed much of the savings of more scientific production, kept them from the consumer, and underconsumption developed.

The stock market, too, had its finger in the pie. The speculative boom fostered excessive production by making financing easy for new and unnecessary factories. The productive capacity of Europe, impaired by the war, was being restored, as the facilities at home were expanded further.

Artificial Stimulants.

Consumption was artificially stimulated by development of new forms of credit, and little distinction was made between extension of credit that is productive, or pays its way, and credit that is not, and is used only at the expense of future consumption.

A collapse of commodity prices naturally ensued. The aggregate decline in the past year is variously estimated between 15 and 20 per cent.

Several commodities, including copper, sugar, gasoline, and various farm products, have fallen in price below the cost of production, which will automatically check excess production in time, if it is not voluntarily checked.

Furthermore, cost of living has declined, probably more than 10 per cent, thus increasing potential consumption.

Loans Show Huge Decline in 1930 As Credit Structure Is Readjusted

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The credit structure of the country spent most of 1930 completing readjustments from the inflation witnessed during the boom period.

Early in the year the world's central banking authorities, sensing a depression of unusual severity, adopted an easy money policy designed to smooth, so far as possible, the path of business through the slump and to facilitate the eventual recovery of trade. In this program the federal reserve system took a leading part.

More spectacular than the successive reductions in central bank rediscount rates, however, was the enormous deflation in loans.

Borrowings on securities, which had reached a total of roughly $17,000,000,000 in October, 1929, dropped to $10,500,000,000, a cut of about 40 per cent.

Federal reserve member bank loans to brokers, an important item, tobogganed almost steadily after the year's peak, $4,270,000,000, had been reached in April, and went to a record low nearly 70 per cent under the all-time high of $6,804,000,000 early in October, 1929.

All these developments were of a favorable nature, since they indicated that speculative credit had been reduced to abnormal proportions. But the billion dollar drop in commercial loans of reporting federal reserve member banks, which comprise 40 per cent of the country's banking institutions, told the less pleasing story of slackening business activity.

World interest rates declined sharply during the year, but nowhere were the reductions more noticeable than in New York. Call money on the stock exchange sagged from its official January high of 6 per cent to 1 1-2 per cent in June.

WORK, THRIFT TERMED BEST TRADE STIMULUS

BY GEORGE V. M'LAUGHLIN,
President Brooklyn Trust Company.

Sometime before the end of the year 1931 I expect to see a reversal in the downward trend of business activity which has continued, with only minor interruptions, since the middle of 1929. While I do not venture to set the approximate date, I would not be surprised to see such a turn during the first two or three months. When it comes, the first evidence probably will be seen in the retail trade.

The situation created by the era of reckless spending and credit extension culminating in 1929 was far more serious than many had supposed, and the readjustment therefore is requiring more time than had been anticipated. All the wreckage has not yet been cleared up, as recent events have demonstrated. We must return to the fundamentals of work and thrift, and while some progress has been made along this line, a few expedients might reasonably be expected to aid the process of recovery.

Governments can help by lending encouragement to private enterprises—not by wholesale authorization of unnecessary and unproductive public works which must be paid for out of taxpayers' money. Railroads and public utilities—two of the most important sinews of our economic structure—should be permitted to earn a fair return on invested capital instead of being subjected to constant pressure for lower rates while their taxes are being revised upward. If this is done, I feel that our public service organizations will be enabled to provide more steadier employment to a vast number of persons and much would be accomplished toward solving one of our most serious problems.

Industry in general must solve its production problems without public aid if recovery is to endure. Some branches have shown gratifying progress. Residential building construction, for example, has been curtailed for more than a year and the results already are becoming apparent in a somewhat lower percentage of vacancies. In some other lines the situation remains to be remedied.

There is every reason to believe that legitimate business enterprises will have the benefit of an abundance of short term credit throughout 1931.

Electrical Exports Drop.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Export of electrical apparatus and materials during 1930 was only slightly below that of 1929, the biggest year on record.

NOTED STATISTICIAN SEES UPWARD BUSINESS SWING IN 1931

Cotton Price Rise Expected As Production Is Curtailed

BY E. F. CREEKMORE,
President, Cotton Stabilization Corporation.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The present value of cotton means decreased production and eventually increased consumption. The world is interested in cotton and some mills have anticipated their needs for from one to three years. Others are now considering or making arrangements to do so. Higher prices will probably finally ensue.

E. F. Creekmore.

The Cotton Stabilization Corporation of nominal capital, owned by cotton co-operative associations, is financed by the federal farm board. Its charter provides any profit or losses incurred through its operations shall revert to the treasury of the United States.

The American Cotton Co-operative Association is owned by and operated for the benefit of 11 cotton co-operative associations doing business in all cotton producing states, excepting Virginia and Arizona but including California. The profits or losses revert to the more than 150,000 members of the state associations.

The federal farm board announced in October, 1929, it would lend through the various state cotton co-operative associations on a 16 cents per pound basis for middling 7-8 staple.

This announcement was later responsible for the organization of the Cotton Stabilization Corporation which took over from the co-operative associations approximately 1,300,000 bales on the basis of the loan value with partial adjustments for carrying charges.

Because of the abnormally low level of prices for cotton this season, the American Cotton Co-operative Association, with the financial assistance of the federal farm board, has been advancing through the various state associations 90 per cent of the market value of their members' cotton. Approximately 1,900,000 bales have been received; estimated receipts for the remainder of the season will increase the total to 2,500,000 bales.

CURB VOLUME DROPS TO HALF 1929'S TOTAL

In common with other security markets the New York Curb Exchange saw prices of stocks listed there begin to drop early last year and the decline continued until the end. Sales for the year, approximating 215,000,000 shares, were less than half of the 1929 total.

Due to cheaper money rates which prevailed bond sales showed a sharp increase. The total was about $800,000,000, or almost $300,000,000 more than in 1929.

At the end of this year there were about 2,800 stocks and bonds admitted to trading privileges, an increase of 3,000 issues. The total comprises about 2,300 domestic and foreign stocks, about 440 domestic bonds and 100 foreign bonds.

The aggregate value of all stocks and bonds traded during 1930 increased from $19,350,000 to $21,000,000. In addition there are about 900,000,000 shares without par value. Of the total number of active stocks over 65 per cent, or about 1,450 issues, are in the dividend paying class.

Service Not Extended.

As a result of the drastic decline in security values during 1930 and the decrease in volume of business, little headway was made in extending the ticker service. At the close of 1929 approximately 3,000 tickers were in active operation and more than 100 cities were covered.

There were about 60 Curb memberships transferred during the year. The year's high for seats was $225,000 and the low $70,000. This was made in October and prices climbed back above $100,000 in December. The all-time high for a Curb seat was $254,000, made in September, 1929.

One of the greatest forward steps taken by the exchange during 1930 was the inauguration of a call money desk on the trading floor April 23. The establishment of this money market was made possible through the co-operation of banks and trust companies representing leading Wall Street financial interests.

The success of the money desk has proven to be a greater factor in the evolution of the exchange than the action taken by the banks and trust companies three years ago, when they agreed to accept the guarantees on stock certificates of members of the Curb Exchange Clearing House. Prior to that time only Stock Exchange firms, banks and trust companies were authorized to certify to the genuineness of signatures.

The establishment of the money desk was not expected to and did not revolutionize the method of doing business with banking houses, for the reason that many members were desirous of continuing their present private banking arrangements.

1,000 Issues Approved.

It is estimated that nearly 1,000 issues have been approved as satisfactory collateral for bank loans. With the completion of the new building in March of 1931, concentration of the money loaning function on the floor of the exchange should be almost as complete as in the organized call money market on the Stock Exchange. Since the money desk was established in April, 1930, the average loans per week have totaled $1,695,000 and the call money rate has fluctuated between 4.17 per cent and 2.40 per cent.

Another event in the evolution of the exchange was the dedication of the cornerstone in the new addition to the present building. This occurred July 15.

The new building, which is to be 14 stories in height, and which is to be completed in March, 1931, will be equipped with every modern mechanical facility for the consummation of business, William S. Muller, president of the exchange, in an address at that time, stressed the growth of the volume of business which the Curb Exchange had experienced since 1921, when the present building was taken over. He reviewed plans for the addition, which provide for a frontage of 178 feet on Trinity place and 181 feet in depth to Greenwich street. The new addition will rise 225 feet above the sidewalk and extend 35 feet 9 inches underground.

UPTURN WILL COME SOON, STATES MOODY

In view of what happened in 1930 "there is bound to be a turn for the better soon," said John Moody, president of Moody's Investors Service, in stating that the coming of the new year is greeted with relief all around.

"Necessary deflation has proceeded in all lines now," Mr. Moody declared. "In the early months of 1930 we had price deflation among commodities, and this has gone far enough to provide the basis for a recovery. In fact, taking in sail has gone on in all departments of commercial and industrial lines for more than a year. In industry, the work of correction has been largely, if not entirely, completed."

Noting that the financial community has been rapidly deflating, with overextended banks closing and brokers and security houses consolidating and retrenching, Mr. Moody expressed the belief that a large part of a deflation has been accomplished. He said, however, that the situation is not completely cured and consequently, "it would be rash to look for quick improvement." The upturn, he stated, "is far more likely to make its appearance in the spring of the year than at any other time."

1930 SETS UP GAIN IN SAVINGS DEPOSITS

BY THOMAS F. WALLACE,
President, National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

Despite business depression and increasing unemployment, savings deposits in banks and trust companies of the continental United States have made a notable increase during 1930, and in the closing months of the year the percentage of increase is larger than in the first quarter.

On June 30, there were $267,180,000 more in savings accounts than on the same date in 1929, and the total of savings is now more than $28,500,000,000.

Basing a prophecy for 1931 on past experience, we may unite confidently predict that this large increase will continue throughout next year, and that a steady normal increase in savings deposits can be counted on for a much longer period.

From 1915 to 1930, savings and time deposits increased in the United States from $8,807,000,000 to $28,500,000,000, a gain of about 225 per cent, and it is reasonable to suppose that this ratio of increase will not be greatly decreased in the next 15 years.

The accumulation of this tremendous backlog of savings, invested as it is for the most part in the premier securities of our government, various municipalities, railways, public utilities and in well selected first mortgage loans on homes, business properties and agricultural lands, is a sure guaranty of the inherent soundness of our economic and financial structure.

Fifteen years ago our savings for the entire United States were but $90 per capita. Today they were $232. Because of this fine reserve fund of savings, which this year has reached a record high level, the American people are in a better position to withstand the present depression than at any other time in the nation's history. Furthermore, they furnish the sure foundation upon which, if we are children worthy of our forefathers, we will build for a new era of progress and prosperity that will exceed in permanence and stability any that has existed in the past. If in 1929 many of us followed after strange financial gods, we for the most part have now seen the error of our ways, and while the education thus gained was in most cases painfully expensive, it has been most salutary and effective.

Pollyanna propaganda is not what we need today. The American people have never been unequal to the task when they faced the truth. Present conditions are not pleasant. Unemployment is rife, production is slowed down, trade is diminished, initiative is lacking, but these are effects, not causes. The damage is in the past, the worst is over. Consumption is beginning to overtake production, investment is taking the place of speculation, hard work, not riotous spending, is again in style. The income of the man or woman who is employed in buying power is actually larger than it has been for many years, and when we have recovered from our temporary paralysis of fear and pessimism, industry will awaken and encouraged and, buttressed, by this vast reservoir of savings, will again lead us into the sunlight of prosperity.

SHARP FERTILIZER SALES SAG FEARED

BY HORACE BOWKER.

Forecasts of fertilizer consumption for the coming crop year indicate decreases of from 5 to 30 per cent in different parts of the country. This is due in part to reduction in intentions to plant, which is the natural reaction to low crop prices. But it is also due in large part to the all-pervading atmosphere of defeatism with which we are approaching the farm problem.

Thus we find that many farmers react to the sweeping suggestion to reduce acreage, not by reducing acreage at all, but by farming practically the same acreage less efficiency. The farmer uses less fertilizer, he defers the purchase of needed implements or other cost-reducing improvements, he uses cheaper seed, and all through these and similar measures to "reduce expenses." Obviously, the net result is decreased operating efficiency, which inevitably boosts the cost of producing each bushel or pound of crop.

As a result, any advantage that might accrue from an improved price situation is neutralized, if not overbalanced, by higher production costs, and the farmer's purchasing power is just about where it was when he started.

The salient fact about the farm problem—and it is a fact which sooner or later must be faced courageously by those who would aid the farmer—is that it costs about two-thirds of the farmers too much to produce their crops. Some surveys of production costs which I have recently completed clearly demonstrate this fact, which is, in reality, the crux of the farm problem.

Without quoting extensively from these cost-of-production surveys, I merely give the facts pertaining to corn as being fairly typical of the situation in respect of other crops as well.

Government statistics show that the average yield of corn is thirty-one bushels an acre, grown at an average cost of 73 cents a bushel. Other cost-of-production surveys show that where adequate applications of fertilizer are used to restore fertility which has been depleted by steady cropping, the average yield an acre is fifty-nine bushels and the cost a bushel 40 cents. The difference between 73 cents and 40 cents is not only a strking demonstration of the value of the use of fertilizer, but also dramatic evidence of the fact that production costs are much too high.

It is important to consider these figures in connection with the current acreage-production propaganda. Assume that a farmer needs 1,000 bushels of corn to feed his live stock. On a yield of thirty-one bushels an acre he must farm thirty-two acres to get the necessary total yield, as against seventeen acres adequately fertilized. The possible saving in labor, cost of seed, etc., and the opportunity for crop diversification and the increased income on the remainder of the acreage are obvious.

These facts indicate that it is unsound to plunge into a haphazard program of acreage reduction, when intelligent application of this principle can afford such manifest economies.

The first annual report of the Federal Farm Board, recently submitted to congress, states that the objective of the act under which it was created is to place agriculture on a basis of economic equality with other industries.

Industry has been forced to forge its progress out of manufacturing and other economies. There can be no solution of the farm problem until agriculture applies the same principles. Obviously, high-cost farm products cannot attain a parity with the low-cost product of a mass-production industrial age. Economy and efficiency on the farm must balance economy and efficiency in the factory. Higher acre yields are a prerequisite of increased agricultural efficiency and higher farm net income.

Permanent farm relief can be achieved only through maximum yields an acre, produced at low unit cost, accompanied by adequate crop diversification on the one hand, together with the removal of the ever-present threat of overproduction by eliminating marginal lands, which in some sections constitute 40 per cent of total acreage. To the latter end, a coordinated program of land utilization, which we as a nation have been talking about for a generation, is the logical step.

Meanwhile, the low-cost farm producer—and there are some two million of him—has, over a period of years, a lucrative business because he employs efficient operating principles. Increased farm efficiency is the only real solution of the farm problem.

2,800 To Work Again.

A number of maintenance of way employes, affected by the retrenchment policy will return to their jobs on January 12.

Upturn in Stocks Awaits Return Of Confidence, Says Henry Ferriss

BY HENRY T. FERRISS.
President of Investment Bankers' Association of America; Executive Vice President of First National Company, St. Louis, Mo.

At the close of the year our business and financial institutions, having survived the financial vicissitudes of 1930, are now concentrating their attention and efforts on the prospects for 1931, studying the conditions they will have to meet and preparing themselves for the opportunities which may be presented.

For a detailed analysis of the causes and extent of the recent business depression, we must refer to the many reviews of able economists now appearing in the press and elsewhere, and also to the authoritative statement contained in President Hoover's recent message to congress.

In the light of recent disturbing events, what conclusions can be reasonably drawn as to the months immediately ahead? Referring particularly to the field of finance and investment we must start with the recognition that the financial structure depends upon the soundness and activity of business. The price and the security of bonds and stocks rest upon the solvency—the ability to earn and pay—of specific individuals, corporations, municipalities and governments. Securities cannot be better, in the final analysis, than the particular business or community which issues and supports them. This fundamental relationship was frequently forgotten during the speculative period of 1928-29 and one of the valuable lessons of 1930 has been that economic truth cannot be disregarded with impunity.

In addition to this essential and close relationship between finance and business, we must also recognize that the mental attitude of people plays an important part in determining the price levels of securities. Since the time of the World War an unprecedented number of persons in this country have become bond-minded and stock-minded. They are not all keen analysist of values. They are frequently subject to unjustified hopes and equally unjustified fears, and undoubtedly their mass psychology has been a big influence in causing the excesses of 1928-29, and, may we not also believe, the violent reactions of recent days. The disillusion which has come to so many thousands of these amateur investor-speculators during the last year, bringing heavy financial loss, may easily have made them unduly skeptical of the present and the future.

Under the influence of this general situation we find that only securities of the most obvious and conceded merit are now enjoying a high degree of favor. The active demand today seems to be confined to so-called triple A or "legal" bonds, which can stand the scrutiny of bank examiner, insurance commissioner or auditing committee. Yet, in this period of ultra-conservatism, there are available, without doubt, many securities of sound character which are selling below their true worth and which offer real "bargain" opportunities to the investor with sufficient insight and courage to take advantage of them.

We believe then, that improvement in the general price level of investment securities awaits a return of confidence in our business structure, and this confidence can be gained only by tangible improvement in business activity.

Cotton Decline In 1931 Brings Heavy Losses

BY C. T. REVERE,
Of Munds & Winslow.

In setting forth the developments in cotton for the last year, the real picture of conditions is perhaps most forcibly portrayed by the statement that prices have worked down to the lowest level since the autumn of 1915. A whole volume of economic distress is expressed in this sentence. It spells poverty and loss for the producer, depression throughout the textile industry and a reduction of hundreds of millions in farm income.

Cotton, like other commodities, has shared in the tragedy of returns below production costs. The reduced purchasing power of the world due to the drastic fall in the price of silver and the declines in rubber, sugar, coffee and other products which affected the purchasing power of the Far East, South America and Latin America found its reflection in the price of cotton as well as other commodities.

Other influences have contributed to the extended decline of more than 9 1-2 cents from the high level of the season. The high price, basis middling New York, was 19.55 cents, and before the middle of December the low level of 9.85 cents had been reached. This is more than $48 a bale.

Spinners Discriminate.

Many influences have militated against cotton in the last year. Chief among these might be enumerated the tendency on the part of foreign spinners to discriminate against American cotton by the substitution of other growths. This was due partly to the fact that American cotton was relatively higher in price than the cotton produced by India, Africa, Brazil and other countries. Relative price, however, was not the sole consideration. American cotton has been showing a gradual deterioration in body and staple as compared with foreign growths. It therefore could not justify its former premium. India, through better agricultural methods and selection of improved varieties of seed, has been steadily improving the quality of its cotton. The American farmer, through adherence to the one-crop system and less attention to seed selection, has permitted the quality of its product to deteriorate. It is the opinion of the writer that this gradual decline in quality is due largely to slipshod farming methods and the failure to replenish the organic content of the soil through a sound policy of crop rotation.

The effect of this tendency to substitute foreign cotton for American cotton receives graphic portrayal in the statistics of world consumption. The peak consumption of American cotton was recorded in the season of 1926-1927, when the total was 15,784,000 bales. The amount of foreign cotton consumed was 9,756,000, thus making the total consumption of all kinds of cotton 25,504,000 bales. The peak consumption of all kinds of cotton was registered last year when the season of 1928-1929 showed a total of 25,824,000 bales. Consumption of American cotton was 15,226,000, and foreign cotton 10,598,000. For the season of 1929-1930 mentioned above, world consumption of all kinds was 24,719,000, about 1,106,000 less than the season previous. On the other hand, the consumption of American cotton was only 13,021,000, a falling off of 2,205,000 bales, while the consumption of foreign cotton leaped to 11,697,000 bales, an increase of nearly 1,100,000 bales.

Carryover Increases.

The statistical position of American cotton consequently suffered materially. With a crop from the previous season of 14,716,000 bales and a consumption of only 13,021,000, there was an increase in the carryover from 4,517,000 the previous year to 6,187,000.

The unfavorable aspect of the statistical position, however, does not end here. The outlook points to still further reduction in the consumption of American cotton. The per annum rate suggested by world consumption of American cotton for the first three months of the season—August, September and October—is on the basis of 10,784,000 bales. Increased activity points to some improvement, even substantial improvement, owing to the depleted state of surplus stocks of goods. Even with a material gain, however, it does not look as if the consumption of American cotton for the entire season would be much, if any, above 12,500,000 bales. The crop now being harvested is estimated by the crop reporting board at 14,243,000 bales. A further increase of probably 1,750,000 bales in the carryover is indicated. This would place the carryover next July in the neighborhood of 8,000,000 bales of American cotton, or the equivalent of more than six months of maximum consumption.

The cotton trade, therefore, is placing its sole reliance for hope of an advance in prices on the prospects of a radical reduction in cotton acreage for the coming season. In other words, it is hoped that the bearish figures on existing supplies may be offset by the prospects of a curtailment in future supply. A strong effort is being made to induce the south to curtail its acreage from 25 to 30 per cent. No such reduction ever has been put into effect before, but banks and chambers of commerce throughout the south are working on an aggressive campaign of education to bring about a drastic curtailment.

Credit Used As Club.

One effort along this line is represented by the so-called Garrett plan, proposed by J. W. Garrett, of Corpus Christi, Texas. This provides for a denial of credit to farmers who will not agree to reduce their acreage 25 per cent. Farmers who refuse to reduce acreage or who violate their agreement are to be denied credit for a period of five years to come.

Whether this plan will be put into effective operation remains to be seen. It may be said, however, that the financial position of southern banks generally affords an excellent reason for denial of credit for full-scale farming operations.

Other factors that will enter into the size of the crop next season will be the amount of fertilizer used and the character of the winter season. A mild winter, particularly in the south Atlantic states, Alabama and Mississippi, would be likely to increase weevil depredations next year.

Although Washington officialdom has asked that judgment be suspended on the results of the federal farm board's program, there can be no doubt that to date the whole scheme has been an economic fiasco. The bill to be footed by the taxpayers for operations in cotton and grain will run into hundreds of millions. Prices are lower than they have been for years, and in the opinion of the trade generally they are lower than they would have been had the federal farm board never undertaken its operations. Speculative incentive has been stifled, market confidence destroyed and iniative paralyzed. The buying power of a free and unrestricted market, once sentiment becomes aroused to constructive possibilities, is far greater than any amount of buying power that can be put into the market by a government bureau. With the uncertainty inevitably arising from bureaucratic operations, the speculator naturally has stood aside.

Present prices for cotton are substantially below the average cost of production. Assurance of radical reduction in acreage would bring outside speculative support. With a free and unrestricted market there is no doubt that a buying movement could be engendered that would cause a material recovery.

BUSINESS WORLD GAINS COURAGE, SAYS INSULL

BY MARTIN J. INSULL,
(President, Middle West Utilities Company.)

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A noticeable feature of the early months of 1930 was the fact that the state of mind of American business was apparently more depressed than business itself, which tended toward a continuing decrease.

Martin J. Insull.

Today the state of mind has not only improved but is possibly even better than business is at the moment. This, however, of itself is a strong indication that business is improving, as confidence and courage are prime requisites.

The electric light and power industry in 1930 presented a picture of rather happy adjustment to the primary necessities of our economic system.

In a period when overproduction had become a problem, sales of power to large industrial producers of the United States as a whole declined—though not materially, compared with 1929.

For the territory served by the middle west utilities system, sales of power for the year to large producers increased, but the rate of increase showed a considerable decline.

On the other hand, sales of electric energy to domestic consumers, both in the United States as a whole and in the territory served by the Middle West Utilities System, registered a satisfactory increase over even those of 1929.

It seems to me that the trend of energy sales, and especially those of the last few weeks, is most assuring evidence that confidence and courage is growing in our industrial and trade system and must finally result in continuously improving business conditions.

PLAN TO FORM STRONG RURAL BANKS PROPOSED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(UP)—Amendment of the national banking laws to permit national banks to establish branches within the trade areas of their cities was proposed to congress today by the annual report of comptroller of the currency John W. Pole.

Such legislation is required to furnish rural communities with strong banking facilities and to assure well-rounded development of a sound national bank system, Pole's report said.

The report listed failure of 649 banks in the fiscal year 1930, 82 of them national and 558 state banks. The first 10 months of the calendar year 1930 brought closing of 742 banks, with deposits of about $300,000,000, he added, comparing this figure with 552 suspensions, deposits totaling about $200,000,000 in the first 10 months of 1929.

Bank Reopens.

VINTON, Va., Jan. 1.—(AP)—The People's Bank of Vinton which closed temporarily on December 20 will reopen tomorrow morning it was announced today. The bank is capitalized at $100,000. It has more than half a million dollars in deposits.

Sloan Predicts Increase in Earnings For America's Leading Concerns in 1931

Estimates for 1930

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—In the following table the 1930 data for 550 leading American industrial concerns are estimated in all cases, and, of course, contain a certain margin of error.

However, the estimate has been made as carefully as possible, and the aggregate figures have been built up from series of separate estimates for each corporation included.

	1927	1928	1929	1930
		In Million Dollars
Net profit	2,559	3,227	3,683	2,378

Common cash dividends paid	1,383	1,519	1,870	1,797
Balance after dividends	659	1,195	1,315	103

BY LAURENCE H. SLOAN,
Vice President, Standard Statistics Company, Inc.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Profits of leading American business concerns should be larger in 1931 than in 1930.

L. H. Sloan.

On the same physical volume of business that was transacted in 1930, these earnings should show an increase of somewhere around 5 to 8 per cent in 1931. On a somewhat larger volume of business, and assuming an upward trend during the latter part of the year, the increase should amount to 10 to 15 per cent and might readily exceed that figure.

Payments to holders of corporation bonds and preferred stocks may be a trifle smaller in 1931 than in 1930, but not greatly so.

Cash payments to common stockholders will be appreciably smaller.

Balance carried to surplus after all interest and dividend payments will be larger.

The accompanying table reports important income account items for 550 largest industrial concerns in 1927, 1928 and 1929, and estimated results for these identical concerns in 1930.

The 1930 estimate, while it has been compiled with considerable care, must of course be regarded as only a tentative forecast.

Decrease in Net Profits.

Net profit (that is, the sum available for distribution to all classes of security owners) of 550 largest industrial concerns we preliminarily estimate at $2,378,000,000 for 1930.

This is a decrease of 35 per cent as compared with 1929, and a decrease of somewhat smaller proportions as compared with 1928 and 1927.

Owners of industrial bonds and preferred stocks received virtually as much in 1930 as in 1929.

These two classes of security owners should, on the average, fare almost as well in 1931 as in 1930.

Cash Dividends High.

After such payments to senior security owners in 1930, net available for the common stock of our 550 leading industrials was $1,900,000,000, or fully 40 per cent less than in 1929.

In the face of this situation, common cash dividends in 1930 were almost as large as in the extraordinarily prosperous year 1929. The estimated decline for the year as a whole amounts to only 4 per cent.

Apparently about 96 per cent of the net available for the common stock was paid out in common cash dividends in 1930, leaving only 6 per cent to be carried over to surplus.

Many Reductions So Far.

It is too obvious to call for comment that the 1930 dividend program simply cannot endure for any protracted period of time.

The expectation of some increase in net profits in 1931 rests upon the assumptions that the volume of goods to be produced and sold during the new year will not show such sharp and rapid declines as were witnessed in 1930; that at least by the latter part of the year a rising trend will be well in evidence; and that many operating economies have been effected in 1930 which are likely to be more apparent in operating results in 1931 than they were in 1930.

BANKS HOLDING ADEQUATE FUNDS

BY ROME C. STEPHENSON,
President, American Bankers' Association.

In one aspect, at least, the prospects for business recovery are now more propitious than at corresponding points in some former business cycles. A glance backward at previous business depressions shows that frequently recovery was held back by the factor of a banking credit situation that was not favorable to business expansion. Sometimes the banks had become over-extended in financing the period of activity and then this condition was prolonged or even made worse by the necessity of carrying their customers over the period of reaction and business depression. The stagnation of business made it impossible for their customers to liquidate old loans at a normal rate and the tightness of money was reflected in high interest rates that made the cost of new loans to initiate new activities prohibitive. The liquidation of this situation was necessary before recovery could start.

These conditions are not operative in the present instance. Without attempting to prophesy when business recovery may be expected in 1931, it can be safely predicted that when the time comes for new business, for increasing the volume of commercial and industrial activity, it will be found that the banks will be amply able and fully disposed to lend their support to prudent plans for business expansion. Their own liquid condition will make the requisite expansion of commercial bank loans possible and the confidence of bankers in the future will warrant expanding credit.

Two Factors in Prediction.

There are two factors in this prediction. The first is that sound conditions are prevalent in banking. This will enable the banks to extend to the fullest degree all the financial co-operation that it will be found advisable to extend to well-conceived commercial and industrial transactions. It is the business of the banks to supply in the present the commercial and industrial purchasing power for expenditures that create profit in the future. This purchasing power, when applied to the purchase, processing and distribution of raw materials and manufactured goods and commodities, results in expanding business activity and this, in turn, leads to enlarged employment. Finally there develops the volume of economic movement which is prosperity.

The second factor in my prediction is the widespread confidence that I find in my contacts among bankers to the effect that the present season probably represents the final stages in the depressive phases of the current business cycle. Therefore, in addition to being able from the point of view of the plenitude of funds to cooperate with business when the turn comes, bankers will likewise be disposed to do so because of their faith that the time is at hand for such action.

Credit Must Be Available.

Such dual availability of banking credit is prerequisite to any period of basic business expansion—what might be called the availability of dollars and the availability of confidence. Either is useless without the other. The function of banking credit is to stimulate productive enterprises that are planned to render services or offer goods for which the public is willing to make profitable returns. The flow of goods and services in profit-making currents makes possible the engaging of workers at remunerative wages and that is the necessary beginning of a period of expansion. Thus, bank credit enables both invested capital and labor to work and earn, and thereby serves as the motive power of business activity. It creates prosperity by confidently anticipating it in terms of immediate purchasing power.

Banking credit, therefore, consists not only of money, but also of the belief on the part of bankers that successful results will flow from the plans of the businessmen and manufacturers who come to them for financial co-operation, and I predict that when the time comes for an upturn in business both these elements will be found in ample measure in our banks.

Inflation Laid to Others.

This, however, does not imply in any sense that bankers will be disposed to encourage businessmen in any but the soundest types of basic enterprises through extending credit to them. It stands to the credit of banking that the trouble-making structure of inflated credit and prices in the recent period of speculation, namely, that in the securities markets, was not created directly or chiefly by the use of banking resources, but in fact its inflammatory element came essentially from advances by others than banks. The banks, therefore, were able to go on supplying business requirements with ample credit at reasonable rates, and furthermore when the speculative crash came they were able to take over in the emergency a large volume of stock market loans and thus avert a far greater disaster there than actually occurred.

Banking in recent years has gone through a distinct period of strengthening by two processes—one was the drastic and unhappy, but nevertheless necessary, elimination of excess or incompetently managed banking units, the other was the widespread increase in knowledge and skill among bankers along lines of scientific bank management, particularly in respect to investment policies, distribution of earning assets in a better balanced structure and the reduction of operating costs. These conditions will doubtless make for a sounder economic contribution than ever on the part of bankers in the construction of the next period of prosperity.

Bank Reopens.

VINTON, Va., Jan. 1.—(AP)—The People's Bank of Vinton which closed temporarily on December 20 will reopen tomorrow morning it was announced today. The bank is capitalized at $100,000. It has more than half a million dollars in deposits.

INDUSTRY BOLSTERS EFFICIENCY IN 1930

BY GEORGE H. DAVIS,
Ford, Bacon & Davis, Inc.

The period of inflation and deflation of 1928-1930 has taught American business leaders the importance of preparing for war in times of peace. The tremendous slump in practically all branches of business in 1930 found many organizations unable to operate profitably, and many corporations unschooled in the economics of industry and methods of reducing costs unable to meet changed conditions. After months of declining earnings, leading manufacturers began to see the necessity for more intelligent operation, better facilities for assembling parts and less waste of material and time in preparing the finished products for market.

This recognition of the necessity for tuning up the economic body brought industrial engineering to the forefront. With greatly reduced sales it became necessary to manufacture more efficiently and eliminate unproductive expenditures. To the credit of industrial leaders throughout the country, it may be said they have set about correcting existing unproductive conditions rather than to hang on and await the next upward trend. The new year should witness the results of this work of setting the house in order.

Call in Outside Help.

The engineer's widening scope of activity now includes hundreds of industries whose leaders have seen the wisdom of seeking outside help on problems which were made even more difficult of solution by the depression. A list of these industries includes branches of the food products industry, those of the public utility field, aircraft manufacture, metallurgical activities, motion picture production, gas and petroleum production and transportation shipbuilding, textiles, lumber and numerous miscellaneous undertakings. The economic and engineering viewpoint seems at present to permeate all branches of activity, even the so-called professional.

Engineers may be of assistance to any organization through specialized scientific knowledge of various fundamental principles which are generally applicable to any business. Moreover, their breadth of view acquired through coming in contact with all phases of business activity from the purchase of raw materials to the sale and distribution of the finished product fits them for advisory assistance to business organizations. Engineers are frequently called upon by promoters, bankers and syndicates to investigate and report upon the soundness of proposed projects before any development work is undertaken.

Millions Saved Investors.

Investors are saved millions of dollars annually by these reports on the feasibility of various undertakings. Promoters of a plan providing for the building an industrial plant may have overlooked an apparently unimportant factor that would make sound, economic operation impossible. On the other hand, if the report is favorable and made by engineers of high standing the financing for the project is greatly facilitated. Many questions that should be answered by an engineer include the scientific determination of plant location with the source of raw materials distribution facilities, shipping rates, trade customs and market demand, availability of labor and labor rates taxation, power rates and many other factors given consideration.

With going concerns, the standardization of manufacture and elimination of unprofitable lines are of paramount importance. And so on throughout industry, whether the problem be the erection of a new factory or the maintenance of an established one, it has become generally recognized that industrial engineering fills a real need in the economic structure of the nation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The Equitable Casualty & Surety Co., with connections in 31 states, was placed in the hands of the state insurance department by court order late Wednesday.

The company had branches in Albany, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas and Charlotte, N. C., and about 1,500 employes and agents throughout the United States.

UTILITY TO SPEND 30 MILLION IN 1931

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A $30,000,000 construction program for improving its facilities in New York state during 1931 was announced tonight by the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation in its weekly broadcast.

RAILWAY CHIEFS FIND GROUND FOR OPTIMISM

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Chief executives of the nation's railways opined in a symposium in the Railway Age today that traffic in the next six months would be smaller than in the initial half of 1930, but that the final half of the year would show improvement over 1930's waning months.

The majority of the 25 executives quoted anticipated larger aggregate freight shipments in 1931 and some voiced hopes that passenger business would not show further decline. The Railway Age, basing its estimate on statistics for the first 11 months of 1930, forecast that total earnings of the Class 1 roads would be about $970,000,000 less than in 1929, $980,000,000 less than in 1923 and $1,070,000,000 less than in 1926.

"Only great reductions in operating expenses," the article said, "enabled the roads to withstand adverse influences. Operating expenses for 1930 were estimated at $525,000,000 less than in 1929, $690,000,000 less than in 1926 and $915,000,000 less than in 1923. The computation placed the average return earned at about 3 1-2 per cent."

Operating expenses were reduced in 1930 by trimming maintenance expenditures, the symposium indicated, although most executives said that no deterioration of property had yet resulted.

CHICAGO STOCK EXCHANGE ENJOYS GOOD VOLUME

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The Chicago Stock Exchange, its annual report said today, approached within 15 per cent of its all-time record by handling trades in approximately 70,000,000 shares during 1930. The greatest volume traded

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

INSTALLMENT XXXV.

"'Why, in algebra, you know,' I said, surprised that he needed to have it explained.

"'I never studied algebra,' he said in the queerest voice. And that was one of the things that set him off."

"Set him off?" Peter reiterated the words with a sudden accession of interest.

"Yes, with all that sense he gave of hurling himself into the present moment, he would have fits of melancholy, when he went off by himself and sometimes walked about all night long."

"'Hexing' Schnitzler's fields," Peter suggested.

"What?" Aline turned sharply in her seat, as if she feared that he had suddenly taken leave of his senses.

"Oh, there's an old man that thinks Mortison dealt in witchcraft," Peter explained absently. "But go on. What else would 'set him off'?"

"I don't remember—they were such queer, inconsequential things. Once it was about hit-and-run drivers. There'd been a case like that on the highway—just a tramp. The man who did it was never found—I don't suppose they looked for him very hard. But I couldn't help wondering what it would be like to know that you had struck a man, and then had gone on and left him. Don didn't seem specially interested—but he went up into the hill pastures and didn't come back for three days. I don't know why that came into my head just now—it's such a silly thing to remember. He'd have those periods of melancholy, and then he'd throw them off as if by main force of will, and plunge into the maddest sort of high spirits. I think that was part of his compelling charm—his shifts of mood, always one extreme or the other. And the touch of mystery added to it."

"Well, it may have added to his charm, but it certainly adds to our difficulties," Peter said cynically. "It's all very well for a man to be bumped off when you know all about him and the only unknown factor is the murderer. But when anybody takes pains to conceal his past while he's alive, it certainly adds to the problem of discovering who killed him. He's helped to cover the murderer's tracks in advance. The mystery of his life complicates the mystery of his death. It adds infinitely to the possibilities of injecting a lot of perfectly unknown quantities. We may not have to look back of Mortison's arrival in Hangtown to explain his murder. And then again we may—that's the devil of it!"

Peter whirled around the steep edge of an overhanging cliff in silence. Then he added with a sigh: "All we can do is to begin with what we've got. Who do you suppose would want to take those letters? And why by all that's holy did you write them in the first place, and not see that they were destroyed in the second?"

"I don't know who took them—that's the worst of it!" And you don't need to tell me that I was a fool to write them, only of course you never think of those things beforehand. I wasn't being sensible. I was completely swept off my feet. They were really just notes that I tucked under the door for him to find when he came back from the farther pastures. He used to go up to see for himself the effect of different sorts of feed, and examine the sheep with the idea of scientific grading. Somehow one never thinks of one's own letters causing trouble. That seems to belong to other people, whom one never knows but just reads about in the newspapers."

"Those other people probably felt the same way about it—till it happened," Peter grunted. "And you didn't even have the sense to warn him to destroy them?" His tone was one of indignant disgust.

"I tell you, I didn't think! I was in love with him! I knew, somewhere outside myself, that it wouldn't last, but while it lasted I couldn't look beyond it. In fact, he told me once that he was saving them—to recall these days to him, he said, sometime long afterwards when he would be far away. All the time I seemed to know that he would go away. Perhaps that was why I let myself go—until there was no stopping."

"Yes," Peter mused, "he did have a way of keeping things—an odd habit, for a man who moved about so much. It's lucky for us he did; that is, it may be lucky, if we can find out what his collection of symbols meant. I can't for the life of me figure out what became of your letters, though. I guess we'll just have to drop that for the time being, and turn to something else. We may get a line on the letters later. By the way, did you ever see this?"

Peter maneuvered Bossy to the edge of the road, and stopped. He drew the Florentine picture frame from his pocket and passed it to Aline. She took it wonderingly, bending low to examine it by the tiny bulb on the dashboard light.

"No," she said slowly, "I've never seen it before."

"Then that's a washout—and I was counting on it quite a lot." Peter's voice revealed the depth of his discouragement. "Every time we start, we run up against a blank wall," he said gloomily.

But Aline was still gazing intently at the dim and faded face of the photograph.

"There's something very like Don in this," she said. "The shape of the mouth—and across the eyes—From the dress, it must have been taken about thirty years ago." Her fingers trembled with eagerness as she closed the case and held the cover close to her eyes, straining to distinguish the intricate lines of the half obliterated design in its center.

"I think," she said solemnly as she returned the case to Peter, "that the woman in that photograph is Don's mother."

"But why are the other faces cut out?"

"I haven't the ghost of an idea. But at the time that picture was taken, Don would have been just about the age of one of those little boys."

"Are you sure? We can't afford to get side tracked on a wild goose chase. The picture's so dim—mightn't it be just a chance resemblance, strengthened in your mind because you're looking for it? Things like that do happen, you know."

Aline shook her head.

"It isn't reasonable that a man would carry a picture about with him for thirty years unless it meant something," she said. "Don had deliberately cut himself off from his past—that's clear. But he couldn't quite let it go completely, for all that. I suppose nobody can, unless they're too stupid to care. It would be like destroying one's own identity; and somehow we do cling to ourselves, even when we don't want any one else to know. There's an 'I' that we can't quite will to lose altogether."

"I suppose you're right—but it does not help much. Suppose the woman in the picture is Don's mother. We still don't know who she is, nor who he is, either." Like all mercurial temperaments, Peter sank to depths of discouragement commensurate with his heights of enthusiasm.

Aline turned on him furiously. He caught her outstretched arm just in time, as she lifted it to fling the photograph over the edge of the car to the canyon below.

"Oh!" she exclaimed tempestuously. "If you're going to act that way about it I won't tell you any more. Of course it's only a little thing, but it's something. If you treat your first bit of luck like that, you don't deserve to have any more!"

In the darkness, Peter's face was slit by its widest grin.

"I won't act that way again," he said with exaggerated meekness. "It isn't much of a clue, but it's the only one we've got, so we'll treat it with respect. Of course, we may not be any forwarder, even if we can trace the picture, and God only knows how that can be done."

"I'm sure I don't know how to go about it, but you've got to find out. That's what you're here for." There was invincible determination in Aline's voice. She was no longer the broken woman of the courtroom, clinging for self-protection to the shreds of her defiance.

Peter chortled aloud at this version of his reason for existence. But Aline disregarded his levity.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION No. 65

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Tarzan looked at the old man sadly. "You will find back in civilization," he said, "deceit, cruelty, greed and hypocrisy. Long have you been gone. None now will be interested in you; you will be interested in none there. I, Tarzan of the Apes, have left my jungle and gone to the cities built by men. But always I have been glad to return to my jungle; to the noble beasts that are honest in their loves and in their hates; to the freedom and the genuineness of nature."

So at last the old man was prevailed upon to remain and be chief of the Gomangani. The hundred Bolgani hiding in various parts of the Palace were dragged out and brought to the throne room. Tarzan spoke to them in the ape language: "You, Bolgani, are fearsome fighters. Beside me sits La, the High Priestess of Opar. A wicked priest, usurping her power has driven her from her throne. You are the last of your race. On one condition I spare your lives and offer you a home." Tarzan then requested the gorilla-men to accompany him to Opar. There they were to punish Cadj, place La again upon the throne of Opar and remain as her body-guard to protect her from enemies within and without the ruined city. The Bolgani discussed the choice offered them for several minutes. Then one advanced toward Tarzan. "We accept," he said, "from now on we swear loyalty to La, our queen." "Are YOU content?" the ape-man asked La. "I accept them in my service," replied she.

Early next morning Tarzan and La set out with three thousand Gomangani and a hundred Bolgani to punish the traitorous Cadj. There was little or no attempt at strategy or deception. They simply marched down through the Valley of the Palace of Diamonds, descended the rocky ravine of Opar and made straight for the rear of the palace of LA. . . . A little grey monkey, sitting upon the top of the temple wall, was the first to spy their coming.

Cross Sections of Life In Gate City of South

Salvation Army headquarters held two meetings of a "watch party" nature Wednesday night, attended by several hundred members of the corps, as well as the public. The first was held between 8 and 9:30 p. m. and the other from 10:30 until 12:30 o'clock. Lieutenant Colonel A. E. Marpurg and Commissioner Alexander Damon presided. Refreshments were served between the two meetings.

Colonel John Clark, national auditor of the Salvation Army, is in Atlanta inspecting the books of the local division headquarters. Captain Alleyne Young, secretary to Brigadier General Underwood, of New York, is here visiting her parents, Brigadier and Mrs. Robert Young.

"FREE LOVE" APPEAL IN SPICY DIALOGUE

"Free Love," the featured picture at the Capitol theater this week, is a nice little domestic drama which depends for its box office appeal on the fact that its characters say naughty things. Though the story isn't an exact duplicate of the one in which the competent pair, Genevieve Tobin and Conrad Nagel, made their first joint success, one gathers that its producers were not unmindful of the substantial receipts brought in by "A Lady Surrenders," and its theme consequently becomes little more than an irrelevant peg upon which to hang more dialogue in the same juicy vein.
The dialogue, compared with the hit-or-miss variety encountered in the average talkie, is full of the most sparkling and sophisticated wit. This impression is due not so much to the conversational brilliance of "Free Love" as to the horrible dullness of its predecessors. But at least it affords us some hope that we may, eventually, cease to regret the old, golden silence of the screen.
The character enacted by Miss Genevieve Tobin could have originated nowhere save in the addled brain of a scenario writer. But when her impossible vagaries lead to such amusing, such all-but Elizabethan lines as the male foil's response to one of her improper proposals, "You're a forward wench," we are constrained to make allowances. A Grantland Rice "Sportlight," a Graham McNamee news reel, and a feature entitled, "Strange As It Seems," complete a fairly adequate program.

POLE ASKS CHANGE IN BANKING LAW

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Amendment to the national banking laws to permit branch banking within trade areas was recommended today by John W. Pole, comptroller of the currency, as a means of preventing failure of small country banks.
In his annual report Pole said the situation of the small banks had become serious with 742 failures of institutions with $300,000,000 deposits in the first 10 months of 1930. There were 522 failures in the same period of 1929 with deposits of $200,000,000.
In 10 years, the comptroller said, 5,600 banks had failed with total deposits of $2,000,000,000.
"It should not be overlooked," he added, "that those who suffered most in these failures were persons of small means—country business men, farmers, and savings depositors in small communities."

NINE DIE IN CRASH OF AUTO AND TRAIN

3-Month-Old Baby Is Sole Survivor of Car's Occupants.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A three-month-old baby is the sole survivor of 10 persons—members of two families—who crowded into a small sedan for a holiday automobile ride tonight. The others were instantly killed when the International Limited of the Grand Trunk railway crashed into them at a grade crossing in suburban Harvey.
The automobile was traveling along a newly opened road in 146th street and came to the crossing which did not as yet have a watchman or warning signals.
The wreckage was carried 150 feet and the bodies strewn over the right-of-way. The baby apparently had been thrown clear of the car by its mother, who, authorities believe, saw the crash was inevitable.
The known dead are: Charles Olason, 45, and his wife, 36, of suburban Elmhurst; Muriel, 7, their daughter; Frank Novak, 38, address undetermined. The other dead were two girls, two boys and a woman.

MERGER MAY LOOSEN COFFERS OF RAILWAYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—It is felt in Wall Street banking circles that the unification agreement between the four eastern railway trunk lines will probably result eventually in huge expenditures for modernization of equipment.
Although the railroads have spent some $1,000,000,000 on such work in 1930, despite the decreased volume of freight traffic, uncertainty over the eventual ownership of various important connecting lines is understood to have held in check various plans to improve service and efficiency.

To Increase Output.
